FALL RIVER MILLS OPEN, FAIL TO OPERATE

VICTORY FOR STRIKERS

Attempt to Open at Reduced Wage Scale Met With Practically No Response From Operatives and Only Two Mills Succeeded in Starting at All—Union Leaders Say Strikers Will Stand Firm.

FALL RIVER, Nov. 14.—Fall River textile strikers are jubilant over the failure of the mill owners to move the mill machinery successfully after opening the mill doors to-day in an attempt to break the sixteen-weeks' strike.

Out of all the mills which are controlled by the Manufacturers' Association fully one-half have given up the struggle. They dismissed the few employes who came. They closed their gates. Of the others, the majority are straggling along with a mere handful of help. Engineers and firemen are being impressed into the operating departments. They may close down any moment. It is estimated that in all the mills which were opened there are not now enough operatives at work to operate one small mill as it should be.

There are not two hundred at work in those mills, say the labor leaders.

VICTORY FOR THE STRIKERS.

The strikers find the situation more hopeful for themselves than they expected.

"The victory is more substantial than we anticipated," says Secretary Thomas Taylor of the Loomfixers' Union.

In the Cornell mills there were but twenty operatives inside. The number at the Barnard mills was so small they were sent out. The Stafford mills got a dozen and the Flint a handful.

The Union, Tecumseh, Wampanoag and Granite mills got only enough to start the machinery and the Arkwright and Parker a few stragglers.

"FAILURE," SAYS TANSEY.

The general situation is summed up by President James Tansey, of the Textile Council, who is also secretary of the Carders' Union. He said to-day to the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"The result has been as predicted by the labor representatives. The attempt to start has been a failure. It proves once more the determination of the operatives as manifested from the commencement of the strike to refuse to work under the conditions offered by the employers.

"On behalf of the Textile Council and of the Carders Association, I desire to thank the general operatives and card room help, speeder tenders in particular, both union and non-union for their united and loyal action in standing by each other and responding once more in such a faithful manner to the call of duty.

"I also wish to say that they are deserving of the highest compliment for their peaceable and law abiding disposition which they have shown during which the progress of the industrial conflict and trust that such loyal and peaceable demonstrations will always be maintained in the future and now I again appeal to them to maintain the loyal devotion until this dispute is satisfactorily settled, the strike declared off and all can return honorably together."

"It has been a complete failure so far," says Secretary Thomas O'Donnell of the Mule Spinners' Union. "The owners have not done so well as they expected."

All is quiet and orderly. But the Cornell and Seaconnett mills have asked for police protection for the afternoon and evening, as they will make, it is understood, a heroic effort to keep running.

The operatives say there is not the slightest need of this request for police protection. The greatest demonstration against any returning to work has been an occasional hoot or jeer.

In the Cornell mills there were about twenty operatives inside. At the Barnard mills the number that reported for work was so small that they were sent out at once. The Stafford mills got in a dozen workmen, while the Flint mills succeeded in gathering in a few. At the Wampanoag mills the boss and second hands made an attempt to start the looms near the windows. This was greeted with laughter by the crowd outside the gates.

The Bersee, Union, Tecumseh and Granite mills got in only enough workmen to warrant the turning of the machinery. The Arkwright, Parker and Hargreaves mills got in a few stragglers each.

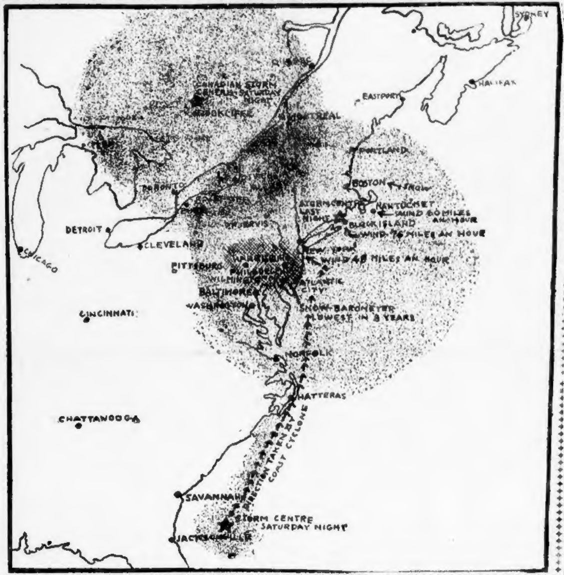
Secretary O'Donnell, treasurer of the relief fund, says that the strike has cost the unions and other sources nearly $2,000 a day for the past sixteen weeks. Receipts in the last few days have been higher than formerly. Fall River alone has contributed $15,000 in money, besides uncounted thousands in goods and indiscriminate donations of a private nature.

Attempt to Start Up Mills Failure—President Tansey

THE attempt to start up the mills has been a failure. It proves once more the determination of the operatives, as manifested from the commencement of the strike, to refuse to work under the conditions offered by the employers.

I again appeal to the operatives to maintain their loyal devotion until this dispute is satisfactorily settled, the strike declared off and all can return honorably together.—Statement of PRESIDENT TANSEY, of the Textile Council, to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

LIFE SAVERS NEARLY LOST IN HEROIC FIGHT WITH SEA



WHERE SUNDAY'S ATLANTIC COAST HURRICANE RAGED.

The arrow path indicates the main coast hurricane, which centred off Florida Saturday night, and traveling north with great rapidity was joined by another gale from the ocean, which reached its height off Cape Cod and Southern New England. Still another storm, which gathered in Central Canada and moved southeast, added its terrors to the disturbances near the coast. The auxiliary storms are shown by the shaded circles.

Gloucester Men Have Terrible Struggle in Returning from Wreck.

Storm's Fury Sends Three Ships Ashore, but the Crews Are Saved.

Special to the Boston American.

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 14.—The crew of the Massachusetts Humane Society's lifeboat at this port nearly lost their lives in brave effort to aid the men on the wrecked schooner Nautilus. In a mile and one-half row coming back up the harbor the Humane Society's boat was filled with water seven times, nearly capsizing every time. The trip took three hours' hardest rowing.

The Nautilus went ashore off Gloucester. Captain E. A. Tolman and crew of three men were saved by the crew from Dolliver's Neck Life Station, and taken ashore a mile and a half up from the wreck.

Meanwhile the Humane Society crew, not knowing that the Dolliver's Neck men were out, made the trip to the wreck with ease, being aided by strong wind. On their return, learning of the rescue of the schooner's crew, the wind was dead against them, and only after a desperate struggle were they enabled to reach safety.

Nautilus a Total Wreck.

The Nautilus was from Rockland, Me., and was bound there with coal from Perth Amboy, N. J. It was owned by the N. A. Farewell estate of Rockland, and was worth $5,000, not insured. Its $2,500 cargo of coal was insured.

The United States survey steamer Bache, which was anchored in the harbor, dragged her anchors for a considerable distance, drifting with the wind and tide toward the beach at Rocky Neck, at East Gloucester. Her anchors held when seventy-five yards from shore and saved the vessel from destruction.

With rigging parted the fishing schooner Edward A. Perkins narrowly escaped the fate of the Nautilus. The schooner was caught off Dog Bar breakwater by the full force of the gale which tore and rent the sails, smashing blocks and tackle. The vessel's anchor held within 100 yards of the rocks where the Nautilus is a wreck.

Schooners Ella G. King and Theodore Roosevelt of the fishing fleet dragged anchors, but were secured after much difficulty.

SHALL WOMAN HANG? IS VERMONT'S ISSUE

STATE QUESTIONS FADE TO INSIGNIFICANCE BY THIS PROBLEM OF MRS. ROGERS.

Special to the Boston American.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 14.—All State issues which will come before the Legislature for determination in its present sitting are dwarfed by the question: "Shall a woman be hanged in eVrmont?"

The question is uppermost in the minds of the vast majority of the people of the State, without regard to circumstances in life, and every constituency is deluging its representative in both branches of the Legislative body with its views.

The question is raised by the impending fate of Mary Rogers, of Bennington, who, in her cell in the prison at Windsor, is awaiting the day upon which it was decreed by the Court, after a jury had found her guilty of the murder of her husband, that she shall give up her life in atonement of her crime, and by the introduction of a bill in the Legislature providing that capital punishment shall be abolished. The bill is the last resort of her counsel, who have made use of every means known to law of saving her from the gallows.

It is not so much a question whether Mary Rogers should pay the death penalty as it is whether a man born of woman, by warrant of the law, shall use the mechanical device prescribed by law to project a woman's body into space and start her soul on its voyage to eternity.

SHALL WOMAN HANG? ATTORNEY SAYS 'NO'

By Eleanor Ames.

BENNINGTON, Nov. 14.—"Mrs. Rogers ought to hang, but there are others who should hang with her. To hang her and let the others escape is not justice."

TEN AMERICANS KILLED IN PHILIPPINE AMBUSH

PROBING INTO MYSTERIOUS PLOT TO KILL

Business troubles of officers of the company are believed to be responsible for the murderous attack on H. D. Curtis, president of the Connecticut Tidewater Trap Rock Company, with quarries in the town of Branford, Conn., where the attack occurred.

N. E. Adams, general manager of the company, whose office is at No. 6 Beacon street ,Boston, has gone to Connecticut to investigate the mystery. President Curtiss was lured to the quarries late Saturday night by a fake telegram to which Mr. Adams's name had been signed.

At the quarries he was beaten into insensibility and robbed. It is believed, however, that robbery is simply a blind and was not the motive for the assault. Mr. Adams said to-day, in an interview in New Haven:

"I take no stock in the robbery theory. The motive of the men who attacked President Curtiss was revenge. The officers of the company have had business troubles with certain persons, and we expect to clear this matter up in two or three days."

A dispatch from New Haven to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day says that President Curtiss is much improved, and his recovery is predicted.

POSSE JOINS IN HUNT FOR A PRISONER

Special to the Boston American.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Nov. 14.—The police of North Attleboro, Wrentham and surrounding towns, together with a posse of citizens, are today scouring the woods in an endeavor to recapture Robert Struck, who escaped from a carriage in which Deputy Sheriff E. C. Brown and two officers were conveying him to the city prison. The searchers are prepared for an encounter, as Struck had often been heard to declare that he would never be taken without a struggle.

Struck, who is 22 years old, was discharged from the reformatory at Concord at the expiration of a term for breaking and entering. He returned to this city, where his escapades caused local officers to swear out a warrant for his arrest.

Struck and two companions were found in bed, and after a short struggle Struck was handcuffed and placed in the carriage. Officer Ellis and Sheriff Brown occupied the forward seat, while Struck was guarded by Officer Stevens in the rear. The officers had driven but a short distance when Ellis and Brown heard a sharp cry from behind, and looking back saw the prisoner making for the woods, with Stevens in pursit. The officers were easily outdistanced.

To the Boston American

We wish to commend the good work you are doing to secure a just reduction in the price of Gas to 80 cts per thousand feet

You have the unqualified indorsement of our Council in this movement

And you can rely on our hearty cooperation

Yours Truly

James E. Coyle Sec.

To the BOSTON AMERICAN:

We wish to commend the good work you are doing to secure a just reduction in the price of gas to 80 cents per thousand feet.

You have the unqualified indorsement of our council in this movement.

And you can rely on our hearty co-operation.

Yours truly,
JAMES E. COYLE, Sec.

United Improvement Council, Representing 75,000 People, to Act at Meeting.

The BOSTON AMERICAN'S petition for 80-cent gas has been made a special order for the next meeting of the United Improvement Council of Dorchester, representing 75,000 population. This council is composed of delegates from all the improvement associations in that large and growing section of Boston, and they are solidly in line for cheaper gas.

The council is composed of twelve bodies that are doing everything in their power to assist in the big fight for cheaper gas in this city. Members of the various organizations are among the most progressive business men of Boston. They have long recognized the injustice of the present price of gas, and declare they are only too glad to assist the BOSTON AMERICAN in the fight for the proposed reduction.

Officers of the Council.

The officers of the council are: President, John E. Savage, No. 608 River street, Mattapan; Vice-President, Dr. James H. Daly, No. 17 Butler street; Secretary, James E. Coyle, No. 100 Kingston street.

The council is composed of five delegates from each of the following associations:

Lonsdale Improvement Association.
Savin Hill Improvement Association.
Ashmont Improvement Association.
Dorchester Lower Mills Improvement Association.
Ashmont Co-operative Association.
Mattapan Improvement Association.
Dorchester Centre Improvement Association.
New Dorchester Improvement Club.
Meeting House Hill Improvement Association.
Harrison Square Improvement Association.
Harvard Improvement Association.
Lauriat Improvement Association.

Other associations that are heart and soul with the movement for eighty cent gas are: The Jamaica Plain Improvement Association, the East Boston Citizens' Trade Association, the Charlestown Improvement Association, the South Boston Citizens' Association and the Brighton Improvement Association.

Will Indorse the Petition.

President Savage, in discussing the situation, said:

"At the next meeting of the United Improvement Council of Dorchester, the BOSTON AMERICAN'S petition will be unanimously indorsed. This will mean that the combined membership of all the improvement associations of Dorchester will form themselves solidly behind the standard of 80-cent gas, prepared by every means in our power to emphasize to the gas commissioners the justice of the AMERICAN'S demand."

Secretary Coyle of the council is confident the fight being made by the citizens of Boston against the exorbitant price charged by the trust for gas will meet with success.

"The people," said Mr. Coyle, "are aroused on this question, as they have not been on any other subject for years. It is an oppression such as caused their forefathers to throw the tea overboard in Boston Harbor.

"The reason the people have been quiet under the burden so long is because they have been kept in the dark about the cost of the manufacture of gas. The BOSTON AMERICAN is unearthing these facts, and the people are astonished and indignant at the immense fortunes that have been piled up in the gas business at their expense. There is not a man who has delved into the matter who believes the gas we burn in Boston costs more than, if as much as, fifty cents per thousand cubic feet.

"This is not guess work. It is the testimony of men who are thoroughly acquainted with the history of gas in this city from the days of Addicks. They know what money has been made and they know what has been expended in the plants. It is not a hard matter to figure. Then they have the result of the testimony of experts. They do not forget the promise Mr. Whitney made that he would give Boston sixty-cent gas. If Mr Whitney could make gas some years ago for sixty cents, the present trust can certainly afford to furnish it for eighty cents.

"There has developed a feeling since the people of Boston began to study this question seriously that Boston should have fifty-cent gas and that if we had a municipal plant it could be made for that."

MAYOR COLLINS'S ARGUMENT FOR CHEAPER GAS FOR BOSTON

Mayor's Office, Boston, Mass., Oct. 27, 1904.

To the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners:

The undersigned, the Mayor of the city of Boston, a city in which the Boston Gas Light Company, the Brookline Gas Light Company, the Dorchester Gas Light Company, the Jamaica Plain Gas Light Company, the South Boston Gas Light Company, the Roxbury Gas Light Company, the Bay State Gas Company of Massachusetts, and the Massachusetts Pipe Line Gas Company, said companies being now owned and operated by the Massachusetts Gas Companies, so-called, are located, complains that the price of gas to the public is maintained at the price fixed more than twelve years ago, although certain circulars of Kidder, Peabody & Co. soliciting subscriptions to stock of said Massachusetts Gas Companies, and the annual report of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Gas Companies for the year ending June 30, 1904, copies of which are hereto annexed, coupled with the reports made to your board of the number of cubic feet of gas sold to consumers by said companies during the years covered by said reports, show that the profits are larger than they should be in a city of the density of population of Boston.

The undersigned would, therefore, petition your board to order said gas light companies to reduce the price of gas to the city of Boston ten cents per thousand cubic feet and to all other consumers twenty cents per thousand cubic feet, or make such other or further reduction as your board may deem just, so that a reasonable price for gas may be established in Boston practically contemporaneously with the fixing of the capitalization of the Consolidated Company, to the end that consumers of gas and persons intending to invest in the securities of the Massachusetts Gas Companies Trust may be apprised of the price which the Boston Consolidated Gas Company is to charge for gas.

PATRICK A. COLLINS,
Mayor.

3 SLEPT WITH GAS TURNED ON

Special to the Boston American.

HAVERHILL, Nov. 14.—Investigation in the cases of James Frawley, George H. Myers and William Burns, asphyxiated by illuminating gas and nearly killed, shows that one of the three men turned the gas off when they retired and then turned it on again with knowing he did so.

The men were unconscious twenty-four hours in the Hale Hospital, but were pronounced out of danger to-day. Frawley was spending the night in the apartments of Myers and Burns, No. 323 River street, where the accident occurred.

SIGN THIS AND HELP TO WIN 80-CENT GAS FOR BOSTON

HUNDREDS AT WORK GETTING PEOPLE'S AID

Thousands of Consumers Have Signed Petition but Thousands More Are Needed.

EXPRESSIONS OF PEOPLE

Are you working to get 80-cent gas? Hundreds of Boston men and women are. They are circulating the petition among their friends for signatures. If you haven't enlisted in this volunteer army do so at once.

The petition now being circulated throughout the city of Boston, asking the Gas Commissioners to reduce the price of the necessary commodity to 80 cents, has been signed by many thousands of citizens. The signed petitions are in the possession of the BOSTON AMERICAN. Later they will be presented for the consideration of the Gas Commissioners.

Mayor Collins's original petition to the Gas Commission for 80-cent gas has had the effect of inspiring public confidence in the successful issue of the fight, which is the most interesting of its kind ever known in Boston.

Boston citizens, rich and poor alike, are proud of their Mayor's record. The best interests of the city feel that, with the Mayor as its champion, the right is bound to prevail. The Mayor's influence is particularly strong with the more conservative section of the public, and it is felt by the merchants, bankers and other leading men of the business section that the Mayor's official indorsement of the fight means an assurance of victory, no matter what means may be used by the Gas Trust, whose record in financial transactions and efforts to influence legislation in the past is so well known to Boston.

Many thousand more signatures are wanted before the canvass is closed. It is the determination of the BOSTON AMERICAN that this petition will be such a strong one and so reflect the feeling of the gas consumers of Boston, that the Gas Commissioners will be forced to take favorable action upon it.

The signatures to the petition are of people in every class and station of life. From the State street banker and broker to the humble dweller in the tenement has come the demand that the price of gas be reduced.

Will you join the ranks of volunteers in this work? If so, sign the blank in this issue of the paper and forward it to us. Petition blanks will be forwarded to you by return mail. A few minutes' work devoted to securing the names of your friends to the petition may prove of incalculable benefit to every citizen of Boston.

WILL HELP THE MOVEMENT.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am with you in the fight for 80-cent gas. I shall do all I can to help the admirable movement of the BOSTON AMERICAN. From the facts, as you have shown them, as to the cost of the manufacture of gas, I am convinced the company could well afford to sell their product for 80 cents. I trust the petition will be granted.

GAS MONOPOLY A KLONDIKE.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Send me some blank petitions and I will get you a list of names to help get the charges for gas reduced. Our bills are entirely too high now. If anybody can help us it is the BOSTON AMERICAN.

I read what Colonel Doherty said as to the cost of making gas, and I agree with him. The company has a veritable Klondike in the gas monopoly.

THE PEOPLE AROUSED IN THE FIGHT.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I trust you will meet with the success your efforts merit in fighting for cheaper gas. The city is at the mercy of the company. Whatever their bills are they must be paid, and so subservient have the people become that few have the temerity to protest. The people are with you in this fight and will not rest until they secure redress for the extortion they are compelled to suffer at the hands of the gas trust.

MARY L. BOLER.

SUFFERED IN SILENCE TOO LONG.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I and my friends are for 80-cent gas and I will send you a lot of signatures to your petition. The people have suffered in silence too long while the gas manufacturers have grown rich by extortion and overcharge. I hope the petition will be successful.

M. P. WHITE.

PROUD TO BE A VOLUNTEER.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

You have no idea of the satisfaction and delight that the announcement of your intention to obtain eighty-cent gas has given to us here in the North End. For years we have been paying much too great a price for gas and getting a poor return for our money. I am proud to be a volunteer in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S army and shall do all I can to help the cause along.

HEART AND SOUL FOR 80-CENT GAS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am with the BOSTON AMERICAN in its fight for 80-cent gas, heart and soul, and know that there are thousands and thousands of persons in this city who believe as I do. I wish to be enrolled as a volunteer, and will start in working with you at once. I am proud to know that there is ONE paper in Boston that is not afraid of the gas trust.

HYMAN GOLDSTEIN.

HELPS BY GETTING NAMES.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Put my name on the list of volunteers who will help the BOSTON AMERICAN in its fight against the gas trust. There is nothing I can do but get names for the petition, but I can do that, and I will. All about my home there are hundreds of people who feel that they are paying too high a price for gas, and they will be only too glad to sign the petition.

NEWSBOYS ARE IN LINE FOR 80-CENT GAS

The newsboys of Boston are in line for the eighty-cent gas petition. At a meeting of their union at No. 53 Hanover street the proposition being so enthusiastically indorsed through the BOSTON AMERICAN was favored in a resolution unanimously adopted.

Several of the newsboys made speeches in favor of the movement in which the whole city is so deeply interested. They said they had gathered their information as to the situation from their patrons. They believed that the Gas Trust could afford to furnish eighty-cent gas and still make a handsome profit.

The Newsboys' Union is composed of some of the brightest little business men in Boston. They are up-to-date on all matters of public interest. Their action on the gas petition is a reflection of the sentiment of the city on the subject.

SEN. LEAHY'S OPEN LETTER TO DONOVAN

The following open letter to the Hon. James Donovan, superintendent of streets, was made public by the author, Senator David D. Leahy, of the Ward 12 Democratic committee, last evening:

"Dear Sir—Mayor Collins has given Mr. James H. Doyle a pledge, and a pledge from him is always sacred, that no city employee or citizen engaged in business with the city under his administration shall be coerced or influenced in any way by him or by his authority to vote in the caucuses next Thursday against Mr. Doyle for street commissioner in favor of Salem D. Charles, his opponent.

"He has told Mr. Doyle distinctly that no matter what you or any other appointee of his may say or do, no harm shall come to any man for exercising his free choice as a Democrat in the primaries. Every man informed of the condition of affairs under the present Democratic administration knows that Mayor Collins's word will be kept to the letter.

"But there are some timid souls who might be misled by the fact that in spite of Mayor Collins's expressed desire you have sought and are seeking to intimidate and coerce city employees and contractors by dragooning them into line for Mr. Charles against Mr. Doyle.

"As Democrats loyal to the organization which elected the administration whose beneficiary you are, we protest against your action and we ask you to give your reasons for it if you feel that you can justify it.

"In disregard of your official duties you have taken action to inject the power and prestige of your office into the campaign against Mr. Doyle. Your efforts have been unsuccessful and we believe will be rebuked at the polls by the Democrats of Boston next Thursday. But irrespective of the outcome of this canvass you owe it to yourself and to the Democrats, by whose favor you hold your present salaried position as a servant of the city, to excuse your course.

"We sign this letter unanimously as the Democratic ward committee of Ward 12.

"Our leader, Mr. Doyle, has organized our ward for Democratic victory, has redeemed it and our senatorial district from our Republican opponents, and has been the captain of our local Democracy since he was 21 years old.

"He has always supported Democratic candidates without regard to race or creed, and has stood loyally by every nomination of the party. As Alderman and chairman of the Board of Aldermen he has made a name as wide as the city for ability, honesty and fairness. Why do you adopt your present attitude towards him? Mr. Charles has had the office for six years. How long do you believe he is entitled to it, and why? Do you question the capacity and ability, and thorough equipment along the best lines of municipal progress of our candidate, Mr. Doyle? You have been silent on this issue. Your only reason, publicly and privately expressed, for the support of Mr. Charles is that he is a "Yankee Democrat." How long since you have come to use this argument in soliciting votes for a candidate? Is it not an unmanly and degrading argument to use in any political canvass? Do you believe that race or creed should be a test for public office? If you are not sincere in this profession, what is your real reason? Why do you and your man Friday, William T. A. Fitzgerald, attempt to array the Democratic organization leaders of Boston against Mr. Doyle? Most of these leaders are out of sympathy with the fight you are making, many of them have openly rebelled against such false leadership. But that is not the point.

"The point is, what right have you to use the Democratic organization of Boston of which Mr. Doyle has always been a loyal and efficient part to antagonize him in a legitimate aspiration for public office?

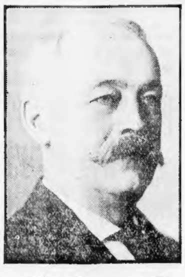
"Are you not bound by every consideration of political decency, by virtue of the office you hold, and your position in the Democratic organization of Boston to keep your hands off and give a free field and no favor to Democratic citizens when they are candidates in the caucuses for nominations?

"Is it not your duty as it is that of Mr. Doyle, and every other ward leader, to help elect candidates by the instrumentalities of the organization after they are nominated and to refrain from participating in factional contests for the regular Democratic nomination?

"We ask you respectfully to consider these questions and to make to them a reply as public as is this letter. Respectfully yours,

"WARD 12 DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

"David D. Leahy, Chairman."



Why Change?

Salem D. Charles
Candidate for Street Commissioner
Should be Renominated

Because
He is a loyal Democrat and has always been true to the principles of the Democratic party.
He has fulfilled the duties of the office in a satisfactory and impartial manner.
He is favored by the great Democratic majority of Boston, and not one reason has been advanced against his renomination except an individual selfish one.

PRIMARY ELECTION NEXT THURSDAY

PROBLEM OF VERMONT LEGISLATURE: 'SHALL WOMAN HANG?'

DISCUSSION OF QUESTION BY CITIZENS

Mrs. Rogers Is Said to Be Morally Irresponsible by Many, While Others Say "Hang."

STATEMENT OF LAWYER

there, who killed her husband there, who was tried there, and who left there for the prison at Windsor.

"She was as bad as they make 'em," said a prominent merchant to me, "but she was a fool. There were others as bad as she, but they were smart enough to get out of it."

"In the whole rotten affair, only the fools were caught," was the way another Bennington citizen expressed it. "Leon Perham is only half-witted. He confessed and got a life sentence. Mary Rogers is not much brighter."

"If she had been smart she would have done a better job," remarked a lawyer who, though not directly connected with the affair, watched the trial with the closest interest. "She's a fool, and when they decide to hang her they should take that into consideration. She is more than simple."

"What do you think of Mrs. Rogers's mentality?" I asked one of her attorneys, Daniel Guiltinan.

"Her what?" he asked in surprise.

"Her mentality," I repeated in a loud, clear and distinct voice.

"I never discovered that she possessed enough to think about," he replied.

Then he turned on me savagely.

"I won't talk to any reporter about Mrs. Rogers," he snapped. "The papers have had statements by me which I never made and they have published pictures of me which were unauthorized. I won't say a word about her to any newspaper representative."

I settled myself comfortably in one of his office chairs.

Is In Good Health.

"How is Mrs. Rogers's health?" I asked.

"Tip top, bang up. She's in perfect health. Never was better in her life. She is plump and rosy and looks less worn than when she went to Windsor."

"Do you see her often?"

"I haven't been to see her recently. She writes to me occasionally."

"Do you believe she will hang?"

"I do not. They will commute her sentence, and they will abolish capital punishment. The State of Vermont will realize that the interests of humanity demand that such a relic of barbarism should be abolished."

"Then you don't think Mrs. Rogers deserves hanging?"

"Mrs. Rogers is a poor, simple-minded creature. If you had ever seen her and talked with her you would realize it. Why, her mother is brighter than she is, in ways, and you can see how much her mother knows. You've been to see her.

"Mrs. Rogers is a mental inferior. If she wasn't she wouldn't be as callous as she was all through the trial, and as she is now. She has little moral perception. I believe she is utterly incapable of appreciating the difference between right and wrong.

"If they hang Mrs. Rogers it will be a shame and an injustice. There are others who deserve punishment as much as she does."

"Do you believe she used alcoholic liquor to excess?"

"She told me she did not drink."

Then he turned to me again.

"Look here," he said, "if you think I'm going to make any statement to you about the Rogers case or discuss Mrs. Rogers, you are mistaken."

"Oh, I don't," I made haste to explain. "Is Mrs. Rogers illiterate?"

Worse Than Illiterate.

"She's worse than that. Her letters are not only badly spelled, but they are incoherent and show her lack of brain power. She is very lacking, mentally. I tell the truth when I say she is incompetent. But I've told you before that I'll not discuss this case."

While a houseworker in Bennington, Mary Rogers was employed by some of the best families in town. All declare that she did her work well and was quiet and unobstrusive about the house. Her worst failing as a servant seemed to be her stupidity and an utter lack of responsibility. Few of her employers knew that she was married. She was known simply as Mary Rogers, and though her husband called now and then to see her he was supposed to be her "steady comp'ny." All girls of her class in small towns have "steady comp'ny."

When Mary Rogers went to Bennington to work it was not because of any sudden and furious quarrel with her husband. Poor, stupid Marcus Rogers, doltish and easy going, and even stupider in many ways than his wife, was too slow a companion for her.

Worked on a Farm.

He was a farm hand. Their home was a home similar to the Callahan's, quite as lonely, about half a mile removed, and only a little more prosperous. It was agreed that Mary should go to Bennington to do housework, and Marcus should go to work for his brother, Will Rogers, a Hoosick farmer.

Then when they were a bit nearer "Easy Street," they would commence housekeeping again.

Finally work grew irksome, and she gave it up. Then she went to live at the Perhams. Morris Knapp also lived there.

Of Morris Knapp, no one seems to know very much.

"He belongs to the Knapps up above here. There's more'n a hundred of 'em and none of 'em ever amounted to anything worth talking about," is the way one man described him to me.

Evidently Morris Knapp found special favor in Mary Rogers's opinion. For several months she was devoted to him.

She announced shortly before and just after she had killed her husband that she and Knapp were going to be married.

Was to Get Furniture.

She had been around town and selected furniture—to be paid for with the $500 insurance which Marcus Rogers had on his life and which stood in her name.

Knapp was shrewder, sharper and smarter than any of the others. The woman who killed her husband that she might gain the money to furnish a home for him stands in the shadow of the gallows. Her accomplice will spend his life in prison.

But Morris Knapp is alive and well. He has married another girl and they seem to be happy. If he ever worries over the fate of the woman who sacrificed everything for him, no one ever discovers it.

Another person whose name has been more or less connected with the affair is Stella Bates, the long-time chum of Mary Rogers. These two women came to Bennington together. They worked, for a time, then labor became irksome. The climax came in the murder. Stella Bates disappeared. She has never been seen nor heard from. In the hour of need she deserted the woman who had been her constant companion.

But she avoided trouble, which proves that she was far from being simple-minded.

With the exception of Morris Knapp, who, upon rare occasion, has been seen in Bennington, the town has few traces of the tragedy, the shame of which is still keenly felt by the citizens of the town.

Perhams Have Gone.

The Perhams moved away, no one knows where. Their house on Safford street, is now occupied by quiet people who have green shades and no curtains at the windows, and rows of tin tomato cans filled with scarlet geraniums along the sills.

Most of the houses in that vicinity have dainty ruffled muslin curtains, but as one of the neighbors said to me in speaking of the change, "A tin tomato can with a slip of red geranium looks better in a clean windows than a whiskey bottle does in a dirty one."

The remains of Marcus Rogers lie in a Hoosick cemetery. Mary Rogers is in Windsor.

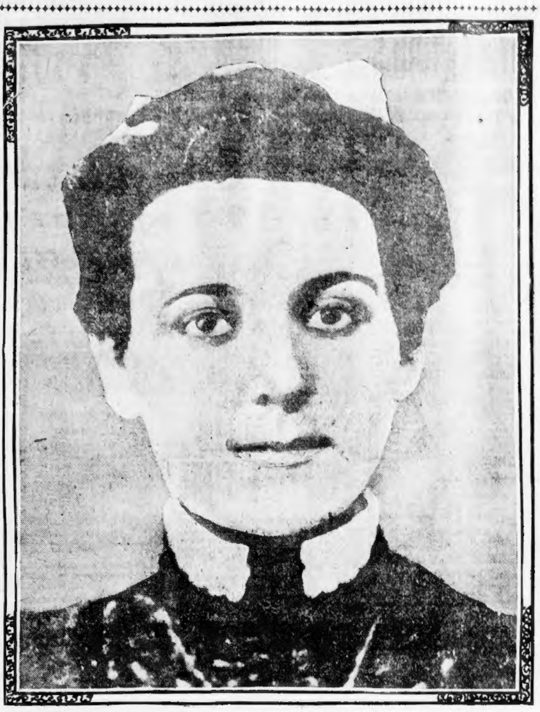
The Rogers home has never been occupied since the murder. Superstitious ones call it haunted. At any rate it is empty and dilapidated. Not a vestige of paint remains on it. The windows are broken. The roof leaks, and now and then a loose board creaks and groans as it sways in the wind.

The bungling manner in which the crime was committed after its bold planning proves more than anything else the lack of common sense on the part of the murderer. After the body of Marcus Rogers was thrown into the river, Mrs. Rogers and Perham took away with them the chloroform bottle, the cloth for applying it, the rope used to tie the dead man's hands, and the insurance book which was in his pocket.

Hat and Note Left.

The hat with the note of farewell written by Mrs. Rogers was fixed in a limb of a tree, in plain sight. In the note miserable is spelled "miserbil." In a note which Mrs. Rogers wrote at the dictation of an officer after her arrest, the same spelling of the same word occurs.

Verily the woman is morally and mentally inferior. For her awful deed she should be punished, but is there justice in taking the life of an incompetent? present civilization I do not believe that capital punishment can safely be abolished.



MRS. MARY ROGERS, WOMAN SENTENCED TO HANG.

WRECKS CAUSED BY GREAT STORM

by Hiram Phillips, of Quincy, was driven ashore at Rockport. The craft is pounding heavily and will probably be badly damaged, if not totally lost.

At Conomo Point, Essex, a new cottage, building for Harry Jackson, valued at $2,500, was blown down and is a complete wreck.

A barn belonging to Asa F. Tarr, at Rockport, was blown down during the gale.

IMMENSE HAVOC WROUGHT BY STORM

The Florida hurricane, which struck New England with terrific force, with but few hours' warning, not only did great damage to shipping, but accomplished great havoc ashore.

All over New England, but particularly near the ocean, there has been considerable property damage, and telegraph, telephone and electric lighting wires are down.

Heavy Gale in Harbor.

In Boston Harbor there was a heavy sea, with a forty-five-mile gale, and only the biggest of steam vessels could make port.

None of the fishing fleet has yet arrived. It is believed that they have anchored outside the light.

The Metropolitan Line steamer and the Savannah steamer, which forced their way through the seas, reported that a blizzard, with a heavy snowfall, was raging off the Cape, and it was with difficulty that they reached Boston. The Bangor steamer also had a tussle with the waves and found the snow thick and blinding.

The Winthrops, Beachmont and Revere suffered by the destruction of trees, shrubbery and business signs. The electric light service was crippled and the towns were without electric lights after 10 o'clock in the evening.

At the Weather Bureau in the Federal building it was reported that the wind at about 10 o'clock was blowing at between thirty and thirty four miles an hour, and was slowly decreasing in velocity. It is probable that there will be a continued drop in the force of the wind and that by to-night normal conditions will obtain.

Reports of the damage done by the gale in Greater Boston began to reach police headquarters and the trolley and electric light repairs stations at daylight.

Mighty Oak Blown Down.

In East Boston the trolley system was tied up shortly before 6 a. m. by the falling of an oak tree, seventy feet in height.

Torn up by the roots the tree, which has been a land mark at the corner of Liverpool and Maverick streets for a half century or more, fell across Maverick street, smashing down a trolley pole with the wires and also the electric light wires. The pavement for several yards was torn up with the roots of the oak.

At 5 a. m. the scaffolding on the front of the Snow Building, a six-story structure at No. 159 Tremont street, was completely stripped from the front of the building and blown along Tremont street for several blocks.

At Columbus avenue and Perry street, Roxbury Crossing, a billboard one hundred feet in length, was blown down and torn to pieces by the fury of the storm. Scores of fences and outbuildings in the suburbs were levelled.

Life-Saving Station Adrift.

So great was the velocity of the wind at South Boston that the United States Life Saving Station was blown a quarter of a mile from its moorings, bringing up behind the South Boston Yacht Club. Many small sloops of the South Boston Yacht Club were overturned and drifted among the mosquito fleet, threatening damage to other boats.

Darkness in Lynn.

In Lynn the high wind played havoc with the lighting service, and after 10 o'clock not an electric light could be seen. All the wires were blown down.

A party of young people going to church had a very narrow escape from death at Western avenue and Central street. A live wire fell to the ground in front of them. They ran screaming in all directions, and none suffered any harm.

THREE VESSELS ARE WRECKED ON ROCKS, BUT CREWS SAFE

Three wrecks have already been reported as a result of the storm, the schooners Nautilus, off Gloucester; the Bessie Parker, at Vineyard Haven, and the E. Arcularius, at Naushon Island. So far as is known no lives have been lost.

The Bessie Parker, coal laden, parted her cables at Vineyard Haven, and was driven ashore in the heavy sea. The crew was saved, but the vessel is probably a total loss. She was commanded by Captain Whelpley.

The schooner E. Arcularius, of Rockland, Me., was wrecked during the night on Naushon Island. She is now reported to be breaking up. It was at first reported that Captain Nelson and his crew of three men had been lost, but a dispatch to-day from Woods Hole says they are safe at the lighthouse.

AMERICAN LINER ASHORE IN DELAWARE RIVER; 1,100 ABOARD

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The American line steamship Merion, inbound from Liverpool, went aground several miles this side of Chester some time last night or early this morning. There being no hope of floating her at present, the company has sent the river boat Columbia down to take off the 1,100 passengers and bring them to this city

POPE HAS ATTACK OF HEART FAILURE

STRICKEN AT CONSISTORY WHEN TOLD OF THE DEATH OF CARDINAL MOCENNI.

ROME, Nov. 14.—While holding a consistory council to-day, the Pope was informed of the death of his great friend, Cardinal Mocenni.

The news caused a seizure of heart failure. Dr. Lepponi was called and immediately obtained the removal of His Holiness to his apartments, where he recovered on the application of a cordial.

The occurrence, together with other recent signs of heart weakness, is causing much anxiety for the Pope's health by his doctors.

Cardinal Mocenni, who has been suffering from a long attack of creeping paralysis, died to-day. He was the only cardinal besides Cardinal Merry del Val who has been living at the Vatican. He was administrator of the apostolic palace under Pope Leo. When elected Pope, the present Pontiff relieved the cardinal of his duties, but permitted him to continue his residence at the Vatican.

Cardinal Mario Mocenni, Bishop of Sabina, was eighty-one years of age. He was created a cardinal in 1893.

The consistory during which the Pope was attacked by heart failure was the second of the pontificate of Pope Pius X. The postulation of the pallium for three American archbishops occurred and ten American bishops were proclaimed. It is more than likely that the coadjutor of the Boston archbishop may be decided to-day.

The consistory began the festivities in honor of the jubilee of the immaculate conception. It was also especially interesting as the Pope lately had been indisposed, and many persons wished to be assured of his recovery. All the cardinals living in Rome, numbering twenty-five, gathered in the hall of the consistory at the Vatican half an hour before the ceremony.

The United States was represented at the consistory by Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American College here, and Mgr. Seton, titular archbishop of Heliopolis, of Newark, N. J. The former, at the private consistory, received the pallium for Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis.

PINKHAM WILL BE NOMINATED IN HAVERHILL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—"To clear up any possible misapprehension, I would like, at the outset, to say that Senators do not 'select' postmasters in any State while I am President," are the words used by President Roosevelt in informing Congressman Gardner that his protest against the reappointment of Postmaster Pinkham, of Haverhill, is not well grounded.

He also reminds Mr. Gardner that the practice of consulting the Congressman is founded on custom alone and does not rest upon law. He has never hesitated to deviate from this custom, he says, whenever he has found it to the interest of the community to do so.

"But," writes the President, "the question of unfitness I regard as one to be determined by my judgment and not that of the Senator."

Of Mr. Pinkham's appointment in particular, the President says:

"I feel that the wise and proper thing is to nominate Mr. Pinkham to succeed himself. I intend to nominate him because he is a thoroughly fit man, who has been an excellent postmaster, who is of good standing in the community, and whose re-appointment is asked for by the Attorney General, himself a citizen of Haverhill, who, when in Congress as your predecessor, secured the appointment of this man to office by President McKinley."

ASKS BOSTON HERALD TO DEFINE

"Yankee Democrat"

Boston, Mass., Nov. 13, 1904.

To the Editor of the Boston Herald:

Dear Sir: I find in to-day's issue of the Herald an editorial in which, after enumerating what you considered to be the qualifications of Mr. Salem D. Charles for the office of Street Commissioner, you urged the Democrats of Boston to support him for the nomination as against me. You specifically state that one of the reasons why it is right and proper to nominate Mr. Charles is that he is a "Yankee" Democrat and a "Yankee" Democrat ought to be given "a show in our municipal politics occasionally." May I ask you what you mean by a "Yankee" Democrat? Do you mean a Democrat who lives and votes in our New England? If so, may not I, as a citizen and resident of Boston and a life-long Democrat, be a "Yankee" Democrat? Or do you mean that in order to deserve the designation "Yankee" one cannot be an immigrant from Europe to this country, but must have been born in New England? Then, may I not be said to be "A Yankee Democrat" by virtue of the fact that I was born and bred here in Boston? I may be on the wrong tack. Tell me, do you mean that before I can be classed as a "Yankee" Democrat I must show that my ancestors were born in Yankeeland, and if so, how many generations of ancestral residence will entitle one to the designation? Or do you mean that because my father was born in Ireland that I can never become a "Yankee" Democrat? Was General Sullivan of the Revolutionary war a "Yankee"? Was the Irish Myles Standish a "Yankee"? What do you mean by "A Yankee"? Is it a matter of race? Is it a matter of residence? Is Irish Bryan a Yankee? Was Irish Blaine a Yankee? Or do you attach a religious ecclesiastical significance to the term? Must a man be a Christian to be a Yankee? If so, is there any sectarian line to be drawn? Are Protestants Yankees and Catholics not Yankees because they are Catholics? I have been trying to decipher what you mean by calling Mr. Charles a Yankee Democrat, and saying that Democrats should vote for him rather than for me because of that fact. I have been more active in Democratic politics than Mr. Charles, I have worked longer and harder for my party, I have held more important political offices through the kindness of the Democrats of Boston, but you cannot refer to these incidents of our respective lives. I understand that Mr. Charles calls himself a Democrat. I do not know that you claim for him any superiority over me as a Democrat. You state that he has for the purposes of this canvass, in addition to many other superior attributes, the distinct advantage as a candidate of being a "Yankee," whereas I am not. Unless you mean that he is of English descent and non-Catholic, whereas I am of Irish descent and a Catholic, I cannot divine your meaning. Do you mean this, and if you do mean this, do you think it is a decent and fair argument at this late day to air before the liberal, unbigoted, broad-minded Democracy of Boston?

Respectfully yours,

JAMES H. DOYLE,

Democratic Candidate for Street Commissioner.

ARMIES ON EVE OF BIG BATTLE AT THE SAKHE

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The continued frequency of the artillery fire on the Sakhe River is occasioning reports that another great battle is beginning, although it is stated that neither side has begun to advance.

The circumstances are said to resemble precisely the conditions prevailing on the eve of the last battle.

According to a dispatch received in Paris from Mukden, a somewhat pessimistic view of the future prevails there, both regarding Port Arthur and Mukden itself. There is grave anxiety regarding the possibility of maintaining a Winter campaign. The local supplies of food, fuel and forage are inadequate, and it is seriously feared that the railway, which was taxed to the utmost during the Summer, will be found incapable of victualling the immense army through snow, to say nothing of supplying fuel and forage.

Mrs. ELIZABETH WHALON.

"I Need New Vitality."

When you feel exhausted—when you grow tired easily—when you lose patience with the little cares of daily life—when you feel that your hopes and ambitions are not as high as they used to be—when you spend a sleepless night—when you get up almost as weary as when you went to bed—when you feel "used up" most of the time.

These are all signs that your nerve forces are burning low.

These are signs that you need new vitality.

You need the nerve strength and new vitality that Paine's Celery Compound will give you.

Paine's Celery Compound feeds new power to your nerves.

Nothing that is written or printed can give you any idea of the full luxury and delight of being always at your best, able to live your life for all there is in it.

You cannot understand it until you have once felt the exultant thrill of the abundant new nerve force made by Paine's Celery Compound.

Mrs. Elizabeth Whalon tells how she found "new vitality."

Wells & Richardson Co., Burlington, Vt. Gentlemen:—"For a woman in advanced years Paine's Celery Compound is an ideal tonic. My life has been full of burdens and cares. Rearing my family and caring for my home, with a few outside interests, occupied my time, and with much illness in my home my strength has been taxed to the utmost. I did not find any help until I took Paine's Celery Compound. It relieved the great strain on my nervous force and gave me such added force and vitality that the other members of my household used it, feeling greatly helped in time. Having used Paine's Celery Compound and being convinced of its medicinal value, I take pleasure in endorsing it." —Mrs. Elizabeth Whalon, 2629 Third Ave., South, Minneapolis, Minn.

Try Paine's Celery Compound to-day.

Take three days' treatment.

See how much better you feel.

See how much more easily the trials roll away.

For over 17 years Paine's Celery Compound has been the most universally used nerve vitalizer and tonic in the world.

Remember this—Paine's Celery Compound is the prescription of one of the most famous physicians this world has ever known, Prof. E. E. Phelps, of Dartmouth University.

All reputable druggists recommend and sell Paine's Celery Compound.

NEW YORK'S GREAT HORSE SHOW OPENS

Society Out in Force to See Cream of Equine Beauties Struggle for Blues.

W. C. WHITNEY EULOGIZED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—To Madison Square Garden for the Horse Show. There you may see the blue thoroughbreds of the stock farms and the beauties of the "400." It is a society event, this annual exhibition of the horse, and the big arena boxes nightly hold more wealth and fashion than can be found at any other public assemblage, not even excepting the opera.

This is the twentieth year of the horse show. It has gained in popularity each season. This year the entries exceed those of any previous year, the classes have been increased, and the prize money aggregates $35,000, which is $3,000 more than last year's awards.

Many Entries by Women.

When the trumpet blast announced that the show had begun to-day the big Madison Square Garden was full. The big tan bark ring was alive with beautiful horses, and the promenade, boxes and gallery seats were comfortably filled. The show space was given up to exhibitors from 9 o'clock until the trumpet sounded.

The entries by women horse owners far exceed those of former years. In the classes for pacers driven by women to rumble phaetons such experts as Mrs. J. B. Grosvenor, Mrs. John Gerken, Mrs. J. Hobart Moore and Mrs. Albert de Cernea will be keen competitors.

At 11:30 o'clock the judging began, the first class being for jumpers, open to all, performances over fences only to count, and for this, the initial event, there were fifty entries.

The show was formally opened by a breakfast tendered exhibitors, officials and friends, at which P. F. Murphy, president of the Mark Cross Leather Company, who leaped into fame as an after-dinner speaker at a single bound a year ago at the Horse Show breakfast, made a felicitous speech, in which he paid a tribute to the late William C. Whitney, whose well-known figure will be missed this year for the first time since the Horse Show became an established feature of New York life.

Mr. Murphy said, in part:

He Congratulates Everybody.

"I congratulate you and myself on being present at this auspicious affair. Our thanks are due to the president and the board of directors for having created an occasion to which it is a distinction to be invited. Our feelings toward the board are somewhat similar to the emotion of that dear old gentle woman who said to the new curate: 'We never knew what sin was until you came among us.'

"Had it not been for this particular president and board of directors we never should have known what a horse show was, or at least one of the quality and distinction that this institution now enjoys before the country.

"The management seems to be possessed of that last great genius in the artist—the gift of omission—what not to do and what not to see. Twenty-one years have rolled their relentless wheels over the association, and in 1904 it comes up smiling—the hardiest of all hardy annuals.

"This horse show represents the human nature of a vast community. It records life not as 'Pilgrim's Progress,' but as 'Vanity Fair.'

Draws All the Beauty Here.

"It brings together more well-bred, handsomely gowned women than ever assembled in any other city in the world, proving conclusively that the horse is a useful animal. By the way, even in the horse the female seems to be able to outshine the male in beauty; they have such fascinating weaknesses.

"This horse show is the mid-current of fashion and every woman desires to be in the swim like that fashionable widow who replied to an invitation to a dinner, stating that owing to the recent death of her husband she could not accept unless her hostess could assure her the dinner would be very dull.

"This is the opening of the social season; the horse show is matured as the annual social event. The pendulum of pleasure will now begin to swing, and it will illustrate the truth of that delicious Hibernianism, 'The best way to lengthen one's days is to take a few hours from the night.'

Warm Tribute to Mr. Whitney.

"I am especially reminded, Mr. President and Directors, that since last year the mills of time have diminished your numbers. A man is gone whose hand can be clasped no more. Lincoln said, 'He who lives in the hearts he leaves behind him does not die,' and high in the list of the favored sons of this association will always be found the name of Whitney. Gifted with a wide diversity of talent, one moment suggesting the keen man of affairs, the next the light-hearted, warm-blooded sportsman. Some one may occupy his place—no one can fill it. The dying words of Cecil Rhodes seem to be appropriate to him: 'So much to do; so little done,' and the elevated achievements of Whitney were only a few of his soul's desire. He died with a thousand projects in his heart."

BATES'S DEFEAT DUE TO LABOR, SAYS PASTOR

"The defeat of Governor Bates was a striking evidence of the tremendous power of organized labor," says the Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, pastor of the Maplewood Congregational Church.

He warns organized capital to heed this election lesson. He declares the Christian Church is on labor's side.

His sermon, bearing on the election results, was in part as follows:

"The defeat of Governor Bates was a striking evidence of the tremendous power of organized labor. While other elements entered into it, the most significant thing was that it was a clear indication that labor men have found and laid hold upon that most potent weapon, the ballot.

"The Christian church is absolutely committed to the moral cause of labor; its founder was a carpenter, its greatest apostle and preacher was a tent maker, its cardinal doctrines are the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Bronchial Troubles [illegible] Cure for Consumption

RICH MRS. SPRAGUE TO WED CHUM OF LATE HUSBAND

MRS. CHARLES F. SPRAGUE.

$10,000,000 BRIDE OF E. D. BRANDEGEE.

Owner of "Faulkner Farm" and Edward Deshon Brandegee Will Marry Thursday.

Mrs. Charles F. Sprague, owner of beautiful and wonderful "Faulkner Farm," one of the finest estates in Brookline and in the entire country as well, will on Thursday wed Edward Deshon Brandegee, the college chum of her first husband, the late Congressman, Charles F. Sprague. Mr. Brandegee was a member of the class of 1881 at Harvard, and Sprague was a 1879 man. Mr. Brandegee, however, was captain of the university crew in his senior year.

Congressman Sprague died nearly three years ago and left his entire fortune to his widow. This, with the fortune left by her grandfather, William F. Weld, for whom Weld Hall at Harvard was built as a memorial, makes her the possessor of an estate valued at least at $10,000,000. Her home in Brookline is surrounded by gardens modelled after the famous gardens of Italy and has long been one of the places of renown for its beauty in the country.

Mr. Brandegee is a retired merchant and capitalist of Utica, New York. He has been a close friend of Mrs. Sprague ever since he was in college. They will make their home in Brookline with residences in Newport and Washington.

The ceremony will be performed Thursday morning at St. Stephen's Episcopal church on Florence street, by the Rev. Dr. Ellis Bishop, pastor of the church. Only personal friends have been invited. The groom-to-be is forty years old and Mrs. Sprague is thirty-two.

MISSIONARY, NOW BISHOP, IS TO RETURN TO CHINA

Rev. Logan Herbert Roots Elevated to Episcopacy at Emmanuel, and Goes to Han-Kow.

In the presence of a large gathering of Episcopal churchmen Rev. Logan Herbert Roots was elevated to the episcopacy, at Emmanuel Church to-day. The seat of his bishopric will be at Han Kow, China. The consecration service was the second performed in Emmanuel Church, the other being that by which Bishop Charles H. Brent, of Manila, P. I., was elevated two years ago.

The consecration service was performed by Bishop Frederick R. Graves, D. D., of Shanghai, China. The attending presbyters were Rev. Gouverneur F. Mosher, St. John's College, Shanghai, and Rev. Herman Page, of Chicago. The consecration sermon was preached by Bishop Lawrence.

The arrangements for the ceremony, which was deeply impressive, were made by a committee consisting of Rev. John W. Suter, of Winchester, chairman; Rev. Maximilian L. Kellner, D. D., of Cambridge; Rev. Daniel Addison, D. D., of Brookline, and Rev. Charles E. Hutchinson, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Boston.

Bishop Roots was one of the three missionary bishops selected by the recent Episcopal convention. He succeeds Bishop J. Addison Ingle, who died a year ago. He is thirty-four years old and a graduate of Harvard, class of '91. After working in Y. M. C. A. work he entered the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, and was graduated in 1896. He has already served several years as a missionary in China and was prominent in the discussion of missionary work in the convention.

LABOR URGES A LAW TO FIX LIVING PRICES

W. L. Douglas to Be Asked to Name Commission to Regulate Cost of Necessities.

UNIONS ASKED TO GIVE AID

Hon. W. L. Douglas, on assuming the duties of Governor, will be requested by the Building Trades Council to appoint a commission whose duties shall be to regulate prices on the necessaries of life, such as foodstuffs and light and fuel for different seasons of the year.

A bill will also be presented at the next session of the General Court, and other Central Labor bodies will be urged to further the passage of such a measure.

The resolution, drawn up by President Jeremiah J. Donovan, and passed at a meeting of that body, is as follows:

"In view of the fact that, when the necessaries of life, such as foodstuffs, light and fuel are needed the most and cannot be dispensed with, the prices are increased to such an exorbitant figure that after purchasing the same it leaves the wage earner no money for other household purposes, and if he needs anything else it must be purchased on the credit plan, through which indebtedness he finds it difficult to extricate himself, even by the strictest economy and self-denial, be it

"Resolved, That the next Legislature be requested to pass a bill to create a commission, to be appointed by the Governor, whose duties it shall be to regulate the selling prices on foodstuffs, light and fuel for different seasons of the year; same to be fair and reasonable to purchaser and still leave an honest profit to the dealer; and that all persons who deal in foodstuffs, light and fuel must receive a license from the commission before they can transact or continue to transact business; and that any person or firm charging in excess of the rates set by the commission shall suffer the penalty of losing his license, and be it further

"Resolved, That a committee be appointed to draw up a suitable bill on this subject to be presented at the next session of the General Court."

SAYS JOHN D. IS NO BAPTIST

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, would deny John D. Rockefeller a place in the church.

He remarked during the course of his address that the Baptists have a good deal to answer for, and referred to "one deacon of the Baptist Church, the richest man in the world, who has no right in a Baptist church or any other church."

When asked after the service to whom he referred, Dr. Johnson said he meant John D. Rockefeller, and that he didn't believe this man's methods of getting more money and his general conduct in business compatible with church membership.

CABINET WINS IN ITALIAN ELECTION

ROME, Nov. 14.—In the general elections in Italy, just held, the Socialists lost three seats in the Chamber, the Republicans five seats and the Radicals eight seats. The result is considered a victory for the Cabinet.

FIRE ON THE RHYNLAND.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The explosion of a lamp caused a fire on the Red Star line steamer Rhynland, at her dock here to-day. The flames were confined to the forward part of the vessel. One officer was slightly burned.

ASSOCIATES TO HONOR DOUGLAS

Brockton Commercial Club Reception to Governor-Elect To-night.

ABOUT 400 TO ATTEND

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Nov. 14.—In honor of the great political victory achieved by William L. Douglas, one of its oldest and most popular members, the Commercial Club, of Brockton, will to-night give a reception and dinner. The affair will be held at the club rooms, North Main street, and it is expected that a gathering of about four hundred will attend.

There are over two hundred members of the club and each member has the privilege of inviting one outsider to attend the reception. The clubhouse has been handsomely decorated for the occasion. The reception will begin at 8:30.

Mr. Douglas will be escorted from his house to the clubhouse by a committee consisting of President Edward M. Thompson, Vice-President A. C. Thompson and John S. Kent. President Thompson will preside at the reception and make the speech of congratulation, to which Mr. Douglas will fittingly respond. The reception will be informal, and is intended by its promoters to be simply an expression of the good will of friends, neighbors and business associates.

COTTON MILLS ON FULL TIME

WHITINSVILLE, Nov. 14.—After running on short schedules for several months, the cotton mills of the Whitinsville Manufacturing Company here and the Linwood mills at Linwood went on a full time schedule to-day.

The North Bridge cotton mills and the Saunders Manufacturing Company's plant in Saunderville are also running on full time. These mills employ about 1,000 operatives.

ANOTHER CURED OF Nervousness

Quinona quickly cured me of extreme nervousness. I was extremely nervous, could not sleep, and was greatly troubled with indigestion. After taking Quinona for a short time my nervousness entirely disappeared. I now sleep well and my stomach is in excellent condition.
J. E. HEYMER,
Of J. E. Heymer & Sons, Electrotypers, 179 Devonshire St., Boston.

Rev. E. Hilton Post, pastor Grace Evangelican Church, Everett, and living at 76A Francis St., Everett, Mass., writes: "Quinona gave me strength and vitality after passing through a siege of nervous prostration."

Everyone who takes Quinona reaps its benefits. If you have any form of stomach trouble, your digestive organs are weak, if you can't sleep, have no appetite, or your nerve system is in a weak condition, Quinona will cure you as quickly as it does all others. You feel the good it is doing you from the very first. All druggists sell Quinona, large bottle $1. For free medical advice write THE QUINONA CO., 1 Hartford St., Boston.

WORMS
"I had for years suffered from what medical men called Dyspepsia and Catarrh of the Stomach. In August I purchased a box of Cascarets and was surprised to find that I "had 'em"—yes—a wiggling squirming mass left me. Judge our doctor's surprise when I showed him thirty feet and in another day the remainder, about the same length of a tape worm that had been sapping my vitality for years. I have enjoyed the best of health ever since. I trust this testimonial will appeal to other sufferers."

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

FRISCO SPORTS DON'T WANT GANS AND BRITT AGAIN

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—There is a restrictive clause in the articles of agreement signed by Battling Nelson and "Young Corbett" that is the limit. It debars either pugilist from leaving his camp during the last three weeks of his training under a penalty of $500. This is something both novel and original in the way of safeguarding. We are accustomed to weight forfeits, appearance forfeits and all manner of forfeits, but a stay-at-home forfeit is certainly the limit.

The motive of a restraining order of this kind suggests itself. Fighters tire of the treadmill work of rounding into shape and like to break the monotony of it all with surreptitious visits to points in the city where good fellowship prevails and pleasure reigns. Such lapses from the straight and narrow road of the training routine are inimical to good condition.

What Boxer Needed It?

Just who was the author of this up-to-date form of fight contract is not made to appear. Some say that the articles were framed for the purpose of keeping "Corbett" within bounds. Others claim that it is Nelson who required disciplining. The only thing sure is that the agreement between the fighters and the Hayes Valley Club contains the clause in question.

Of course the articles are not to be read literally. If they were the fighters would not be permitted to do road work. Billy Roche, who is to referee the contest, hastened to disabuse the minds of several of this extreme notion. Roche says the boxers can even go in swimming if they like. "It simply means that they must not come into town," said Roche.

So far as can be learned "Young Corbett" has no desire to "come into town" just at present. He put on a lot of surplus weight during his long spell of idleness in New York, and he is doing his level best to subdue the pouter pigeon look he has attained during the days of ease. He is going in strong for road work, and it is reported that he removed as much as twelve pounds in one day. He is still on the "big side," and will have to keep his nose to the grindstone to get to the 130-pound notch.

There is a guessing bee in progress in regard to the Yosemite Club's December card. The club's matchmakers say they have made no definite arrangements as yet, but it is a safe bet that every pugilistic brush is being diligently beaten in the hopes of scaring out a pair of capable boxers for the farewell month of 1904.

It has been hinted that Britt and Gans may be called upon again at an increased weight. It is doubtful if the San Francisco sports would take kindly to the card. Those who saw Gans at 133 the other night, and who think he did his best, cannot bring themselves to believe that a few pounds extra weight would do much for him. In any case, there will be no public demonstration if Baltimore secures the return match between Gans and Britt—that is, if there is to be one.

Is Terry Sincere?

Terry McGovern has touched the wires once or twice in requests for a match with Britt. The sports here do not believe Terry is sincere. He was always a stickler for low weight, and as Britt is determined, seemingly, not to box at any figure below 133 pounds, discussion of a Britt-McGovern fight at present is simply a waste of words and telegrams.

The one match that San Francisco would like to see in December is Britt and "Young Corbett." In view of the fact that "Corbett" and Nelson box November 20, and that the Yosemite Club cannot get Mechanics' Pavilion for a later date than December 10, present prospects for the Britt-Corbett functions are not over bright.

Of course if "Young Corbett" disposed of Nelson without much trouble it would be easy enough to get Britt and "Corbett" together ten or eleven days later, but the fight fellows hereabouts are not looking for a hollow victory for either man when "Corbett" and the Battling Dane clash. On the contrary, there is a feeling that both winner and loser will require several days to get rid of bumps and contusions. That is why there is such a degree of speculation over the Yosemite Club's December bill of fare.

Kid McCoy's Find.

Kid McCoy has discovered that what ailed him when he failed to put "Twin" Sullivan to sleep was "lack of co-ordination." A doctor told him so, and added the information that when he (the Kid) landed on Sullivan his (the Kid's) entire body did not stiffen at the moment of impact.

McCoy says gleefully and hopefully: "I am now, with the aid of an electric timing apparatus, trying to get myself working as a unit."

Yes, Kid, and there are thousands of fellows going to Carlsbad and Weisbaden every year in the fond hope of getting back to where they were fifteen years ago.

There was no particular ripple of interest or excitement when it was announced that Joe Choynski had retired. The reason is obvious. In the matter of retiring Choynski is comparatively an unknown. He has only retired fourteen times, or say fifteen for good measure. But keep on Joe, you are young yet.

COBB, BROWN'S CLEVER HALF

This is a photograph of Cobb, Brown's great half, who has been doing fine work this year. He is one of the best punters on the college gridiron and will be given a lot of work to do against Dartmouth Saturday.

YALE MEN ARE GIVEN A REST TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—In order that the team could get a change of diet and air, the coaches of the Yale eleven acceded to the wishes of Dewitt Corcoran, a "sub" end while at New Haven, and hurried off the entire team to his home, at Ardsley-on-the-Hudson. Mike Murphy, the trainer; Ledyard Mitchell, the head coach, and two rubbers accompanied the players. The team will stay at Corcoran's place until to-morrow afternoon, when they will start back home.

On account of the bruising game against Princeton Saturday, the coaches decided that something had to be done so that the team would be in shape for the Harvard battle. The coaches knew that rest like is afforded at Corcoran's would suit the players, so the trip was planned and carried out.

No work will be done by the players while they are quartered at Corcoran's, with the exception of some light signal drills. In fact, it is doubtful if anything but signal work and punting will be practised during the week, as the coaches want everyone to be in superb form to conquer the Crimson eleven.

Considering the gruelling contest, the Yale players came out of the Princeton game in fairly decent shape.

LIVELY WEEK FOR SCHOOL ELEVENS

Some big battles are on the tapis in the realm of schoolboy football for this week. One championship has already been decided, and it is not unlikely that the rest will be settled before Saturday night. The playing in the entire six leagues has been very close, and has kept the football fans interested all the time.

Cambridge Manual Training, which defeated English High Saturday, will meet Dorchester High at Broadway Athletic Field, Somerville, Friday, and one of the most interesting games of the season is expected. C. M. T. S. is making a strong try for the Interscholastic League championship, and will try her hardest to beat Dorchester, so that she may enter the Somerville game with an unblemished record. Dorchester's only hope is to win from C. M. T. S., and have that team win from Somerville Thanksgiving Day.

Much praise is heard on every side for the achievement of Coach McCarthy's boys, of Volkman, in easily winning the honors in the Interpreparatory League. This is the first time that the school has enjoyed any such distinction, and no wonder that the students are elated.

If Chelsea High whips Mechanic Arts High, at Dorchester, Saturday, she will be entitled to the Junior Interscholastic laurels.

The game scheduled between Everett and Melrose, in the Suburban League, at Melrose, Friday, should be a hair-raiser. If Melrose wins she will have to play off her tie game of last Saturday with Medford for the high honors.

* * *

Two important games are booked in the Preparatory League this week. Friday, Newton meets Brookline, and Cambridge Latin plays Boston Latin. If both Newton and Boston Latin win their games, the former will be sure of the league title, as last week she conquered the B. L. S. eleven.

* * *

Waltham High hasn't much opposition to her quests of the Eastern Massachusetts League championship.

KELLY WILL MEET O'BRIEN

Emergency Kelly claims that he never fouled Rouse O'Brien in their last bout and should have had the decision, but is ready at any time to make another match and go on at 118 pounds, which would be giving an advantage to O'Brien.

Says Kelly: "I know that I can beat O'Brien and am ready to box him at any place or club, and any kind of rules will suit me."

The boys are likely to meet again shortly and settle their dispute. The bout will be one of the hottest ever seen in these parts.

MURRAY HOPES TO WIN BOUT

George Murray is in fine shape for his bout with Chester Goodwin at Salem to-morrow night. Murray is more than anxious to win this time, as he has a chance to meet Hughey McGovern if he turns the tables on Goodwin.

Train will leave North Station to-morrow night at 7:10, stopping at Chelsea and Lynn, and the bouts will be over in plenty of time to get back to the Hub before midnight. Two special cars will also leave Chelsea square at 6:45 and 7 o'clock.

NAT GOODWIN TO BE AN ATHLETE

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—Comedian, or is it tragedian, Nat Goodwin? Anyhow, that is neither here nor there.

The well-known thespian left for Cincinnati Sunday night. He took a prize fighter with him, and this prize fighter, in return for a mere stipend of $150 and travelling expenses, is to make an athlete out of the only Nat.

Andy Walsh, of Brooklyn, is the fighter Goodwin has added to his company. Goodwin and Walsh are friends of a dozen years' standing. When Goodwin was first winning his way into popular favor in New York, Walsh was on the high wave of prosperity. He had fought Joe Walcott, Mysterious Billy Smith, and others of note. Now he will make an athlete out of Maxine Elliott's husband. He will teach the actor to box, row, swim, and various and sundry other athletic feats. Before leaving for Cincinnati, Walsh and Goodwin bought $400 worth of athletic apparatus, including gloves, dumb-bells, Indian clubs, exercisers, etc. Goodwin, beginning to-day will start a systematic course of training, and Walsh hopes to make a crackerjack out of the husky actor.

25 RACES FOR BIG AUTO MEET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Acting for the Florida Coast Automobile Association, and after consultation with some leading automobile authorities in racing, W. J. Morgan gives out from 116 Nassau street a big list of events for the third annual International Ormond-Daytona Beach contests. According to the resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the association, all entries will be by invitation only.

Already twenty-five events are down on the programme. One trial only will be allowed in time trials. The final heats of handicaps will be rehandicapped if, in the opinion of the handicapper, any change is desirable. All events except handicaps, and those otherwise specified, will be from flying starts.

GAELIC TEAMS TO MEET.

With a side bet of $250 posted by each club, the Gaelic football game between the Celtics of Malden and the Boston Rangers, at the Huntington Avenue Grounds Thanksgiving Day, should be worth seeing. The contest will be called at 10:30 a. m., and will be for the championship of the tate.

HAVANA BLUES DEFEAT LYNN

LYNN, Nov. 14.—The news in this city of the defeat by a score of 3 to 2 of the Lynn baseball team at Havana, Cuba, by the Havana Blues, otherwise known by the musical title of the Azuls, has depressed the friends of the local players. It was expected the Lynns, after once being whitewashed to the tune of 3 to 0, would take revenge on the Cuban experts.

Nugent, the big Lynn centre fielder, coached when Lynn was at the bat. He paid his compliments, in English, freely to the Cuban players. The Cuban coachers rooted in Spanish, which caused the Lynn players to glare suspiciously at them. The very batting list of the Azuls reads like a Spanish novel, as follows: s. s., Bustamente; 3b., Carillo; r. f., Prats; 1b., Cabrera; l. f., Hidlago; 2b., Cabanas; c. f., Almeyda; c., Sanchez; p., Borges.

HARVARD'S HOCKEY TEAM.

In order to be in good physical condition by the time the Holmes Field rink is ready, the candidates for the Harvard hockey team will begin gymnasium work to-morrow. Four of last year's team, Callaway, Townsend, Wilder and McLeod are eligible to play.

CONNOLLY HOPES TO SCORE VICTORY OVER BRYSON

Despite the fact that only a short while ago he was knocked out by Kid Hessell, of Providence, Larry Connolly, of South Boston, hopes to score a victory when he encounters clever Fred Bryson, of Waltham, before the Cambridge A. A. to-night. Bryson hasn't appeared locally in about eighteen months, consequently there is sure to be a crowd present to see him show, as he is a big favorite in these parts. In all of the bouts that the Melbourne Kangaroo has fought locally he has knocked out his opponent in short order. He expects to give John E. Butler, of Lynn, a like treatment in the semi-final go.

Scheduled for to-night is a set-to between Jack O'Brien and the old-timer, Joe Choynski, at Philadelphia. As Joe has undoubtedly seen better days, the victory should be easy picking for the agile Mr. O'Brien.

Bostonians are interested in the battle of Honey Mellody and Buddy Ryan, which will serve to open the Harlem Club of Chicago to-night, as Honey is a native son and a great favorite in the Hub. The pair have met before, one of the bouts ending in Ryan's favor and the other terminating in a draw.

That much-discussed mill between George Murray, of Lynn, and Chester Goodwin, of Chelsea, will come off at the Apollo A. C., of Salem, to-morrow night. As Goodwin won the previous ten-round battle between the boys, he is also booked to be the victor on this occasion.

That go between Young Donohue, of Roxbury, and Johnny Burdick, of New York, at Pittsfield, Friday night, should be a hummer. If the former wins he will try to persuade Chester Goodwin to give him another chance.

They say that Joe Grim is in for another walloping when he encounters Eddie Kennedy, at Pittsburg, to-night. The Smoketown fans have been taking a great interest in this bout, and they promise to throng to the battling place in large numbers. The "Italian Fighting Prince," as some people call Grim, says he is going to redeem himself for some of the fluke exhibitions he has given of late, and that he is going to whip Kennedy good and hard. It looks as though Joe were hitting the pipe too frequently lately. Poor Dope!

A roaring old bout is scheduled for Baltimore to-morrow night when Kid Sullivan goes on with Benny Yanger. Some rapid boxing is expected from the call of time to the finish, and no doubt the Oriole fans will get a long run for their money.

Dave Barry, who recently lost a fifteen-round bout to Jack Twin Sullivan of Boston, will hook up with Tommy Burns at Seattle, Thursday night. Judging by the present outlook, it looks as though the Californian was going to put up a winning bout.

Principal Bouts For This Week

CAPT. FOULKE GETTING WELL

Special to the Boston American.

PRINCETON, Nov. 14.—Walter Foulke, the plucky leader of the Tigers, whose rib was broken in the Yale game, is fast improving, and will be out in a few days.

College men are much pleased at the choice of the players for next year's captain. Cooney is one of the most popular boys in the university, and his work against Yale was of the highest order.

SILVER CUPS THE PRIZES

Silver cups of more than ordinary value will be given the winners of the races of the Metropolitan Driving Club on the Charles River Speedway Thanksgiving Day morning.

The events will be declared on the two-in-three heat plan, and are open only to horses that have started in at least two will be for the championship of the State.

WANT TO SEE WALSH BOX

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Chicago sports are glad to hear there's a prospect of Jimmy Walsh, the New England champion bantam, coming here soon.

It is likely that a match will be arranged between Monte Attell and Jimmy Walsh. If the match is clinched, the pair will furnish the windup at one of the Chicago A. C. shows.

GARDNER MAY MEET WINNER

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Jimmy Gardner, the Lowell, Mass., lightweight, who is in Chicago, will witness the mill between Billy Mellody and Buddy Ryan at the Harlem A. C. to-night. Gardner has signified his willingness to meet the winner at a later date, if suitable weights can be arranged. Gardner and Mellody were matched to meet last year at 140 pounds, but the match fell through.

O'BRIEN SURE OF WINNING

John Shealy, manager for Rouse O'Brien, who won a decision on a foul from Emergency Kelly at the Union A. C. in their last meeting, says that he would like to match his boy against Kelly, as he is satisfied that O'Brien is the latter's master and can best him in a fair bout.

Manager Shealy says: "I wish to state through your paper that the first time that Rouse O'Brien met Kelly he showed he was his superior, and I would like to make another match with Kelly to prove that O'Brien would beat him in a fair bout even though Kelly is out of his class."

FAST BRITONS MAY MEET

Special to the Boston American.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Efforts are being made by the matchmaker of the National Sporting Club of London, to bring Ben Jordan and Peddlar Palmer together for twenty rounds at 124 pounds during the second week in December. The club has offered the boys a good-sized purse to battle for, and Jordan has as such accepted it.

BOUT WILL TAKE PLACE

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—By the withdrawal of the Blue Island Athletic Club from the fight field there is every assurance that the Harlem Athletic Club will not be molested by Sheriff Barrett to-night, and the Mellody-Buddy Ryan bout will materialize.

No arrangements were made for holding the Schreck-Willie match, which was scheduled at the Blue Island Club to-night, and it is declared off for the present.

BOWKER WILL FACE PINKY

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Satisfactory arrangements have been made for a fight between Pinky Evans and Joe Bowker, who defeated Frankie Neil, the American champion, not long since. The fight will take place in London before the National Sporting Club, between December 15 and 20.

FIGHTERS GO TO FAIR CITY

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—Eastern fighters seem to have received a tip that St. Louis is going to be a good place to spend the Winter, judging from the way they are arriving. Willie Fitzgerald, "Cy" Flynn, Jack Lowry, Jack Carrig and a number of other Eastern boxers "floated" into St. Louis during the past week.

Nearly all of them are to appear before St. Louis "fans" in the near future.

KERNAN SAYS TEAM WORK IS LACKING AT HARVARD IN THE GAME OF FOOTBALL

With less than one week intervening between now and the final game, Yale continues to have the advantage over Harvard in every respect, not showing as marked a superiority as she did at this period last season, nevertheless an advantage which, if not overcome, will bring her to certain victory next Saturday.

The Harvard men enter their last week of training in good physical condition, considering the team as a whole, in spite of the fact that Hurley, Meier and Parker have been kept out of the game through injuries lately. For the reason that the next five days are the all important ones of the season, these men have remained on the side lines when they were able to play, and now the eleven is as physically sound as one could possibly expect.

Team Work Needed.

It is too late to improve the individuals, but the result of the game is not dependent upon individual proficiency. The only thing which will break through that marvellous defence of the Yale forwards is the united efforts of eleven, consequently team work must be developed during the three remaining afternoons of practice or the Harvard team will be a poor second in next Saturday's contest. The lack of this all important element is responsible for the mediocre, in fact, at times, poor showing of the team this Fall, since the individual players, with the exception of the ends, have proven themselves players of ability far above the average.

One striking weakness, namely, the kicking game of the team in the early season, has been eliminated to a great extent since the Pennsylvania game. Both Sperry and Nichols have developed into reliable punters, the passing and defence for kicks have improved, and the ends have learned much about running down the field. Nichols is the most brilliant punter on the squad, but Sperry is more consistent, practically sending the ball the same distance on every kick.

Fail to Work Together.

There was a semblance of team work in the offence last Saturday, but in this respect the men did not fulfill the expectation of the coaches. The difficulty lies in the failure of the backs and forward to work together. The backs hit the line in unison, but after that the linemen give them no support, and the formations are smashed up quickly, forcing the runner to fall down in order to avoid being thrown back by their opponents' secondary defence.

Individually, the men are playing well. Parker, at centre, has been handicapped greatly by his weak ankle, but has proven himself to be an active, hardworking, consistent player, and should hold up his end in the coming game.

Squires, White and Shoenfuss are anything except brilliant players, but have shown steady improvement during the entire season. White especially has given everyone a pleasant surprise by his encouraging work of the last two weeks. Undoubtedly, Shoenfuss would have been better than either Squires or White had he played the entire season, but at present lacks the knowledge of many fundamental principles of football.

The tackles—Brill, Meier and Derby—are all valuable men, and it is unfortunate that three positions cannot be found for them. Had Brill been able to play during the first month he would have been a wonderful tackle to-day, but his injuries kept him on the side lines through that important period. Consequently, he has many "prep. school" faults, and is not thoroughly familiar with the game as played in college.

Randall and Montgomery are the best all-round ends, but on the open field they are far from satisfactory, often missing their man through their failure to dive.

Mathews and Pruyn, the substitute ends, who are extremely strong in this respect, however, cannot be considered as first choice men on account of their offensive line work.

Starr, the quarterback, is fast, active and a natural leader. Barring Daly he is the best quarterback Harvard has had in many years, and will make a great reputation for himself before leaving college.

The backs, Mills, Hurley and Sperry, continue to start slowly, but are making rapid improvement and surely will be a strong trio in next Saturday's game.

College Football Games This Week

Harvard vs. Yale, at New Haven, Conn.
Dartmouth vs. Brown, at American League Grounds.
Annapolis vs. Virginia P. I., at Annapolis, Md.
West Point vs. Syracuse, at West Point.
Tufts vs. Massachusetts State College, at Medford.
Holy Cross vs. Springfield Training School, at Worcester.
Williams vs. Wesleyan, at Williamstown.
Penn State vs. Geneva, at State, Penn.
Georgetown vs. Columbia, at Georgetown, D. C.
Rochester vs. Buffalo, at Buffalo.
Dickinson vs. Ursinus, at Carlisle, Penn.
Lafayette vs. Lehigh, at Easton, Penn.
New York University vs. Union, at New York.
Northwestern vs. Minnesota, at Chicago.
Nebraska vs. Bellevue, at Lincoln, Neb.

Yale:

Eli's Powerful Team.

In the game with Princeton the Yale eleven proved itself wonderfully powerful, both individually and collectively. The team had such little difficulty in defeating Princeton that one did not appreciate its true strength. On the offence the Yale men showed a marvellous development in team play, and completely overpowered the Princeton line.

Bloomer, Hogan, Owsley and Leavenworth gained at will, Bloomer especially appearing to gain ground with little difficulty. Hogan showed no improvement over last year's form. On the other hand, the responsibility of being captain appeared to rest lightly on his shoulders and had no effect on his individual game. Owsley was not as effective as Leavenworth in carrying the ball, but played a much stronger offensive game.

The Princeton players pierced the Yale line for repeated gains, but could not force the ball to within striking distance of Yale's goal. In other words, the Yale men were able to withstand their opponent's attack whenever it became necessary.

The Yale attack was very different, seeming to gain in strength and speed as the play neared Princeton's goal.

In the Princeton game Yale was able to outplay Princeton, inasmuch as the Yale ends were surer down the field. The backfield work of both teams was extremely ragged.

ROBERT P. KERNAN.

Notes of the Diamond.

Fred Tenney says he is willing to manage the Boston Nationals next season, provided he gets extra pay as manager, captain and first baseman, according to Sam Crane in the New York Journal. "Just where Tenney's salary begins is not apparent, but we hope Freddie gets what he wants," says that noted baseball writer. "But if he is able to unlock the padlock on the triumvir jeans Freddie will deserve a seat on The Hague Peace Commission as a diplomat. Baseball will be too cheap for him."

The Phillies are to put their house in order this week, and in his record autograph review Ray Ziegler says: "With a new set of officials to guide it there is no reason why the Phillies next year should not be more successful than at any time since Reach and Rogers disposed of the club. There are enough good players on the team to form the nucleus of a good nine. All that is needed is a few more good additions to make the team a winner."

DAINTY HOUSE GOWNS FOR AFTERNOON WEAR, BY MRS. JOSEFA OSBORN

AFTERNOON costumes are made of the daintiest materials this season. Yards and yards of filmy lace and pleated net and chiffon trim many of the gowns.

White is still very popular, and voile a popular material. One of the prettiest suits I have seen is made of a heavy weight of cream-colored voile. The skirt, falling in forward pleats, laid closely together at the waist. Bands of wool braid trim it round the foot.

The waist is cut in the little jacket fashion, with a deep yoke of fine lace and embroidery insertion. Instead of revers a narrow band of the same embroidery turns back over two ruffles of hemstitched, knife-pleated linen. The sleeves fall very full, with deep turn back cuffs and lingerie ruffles. Three rows of the wool braid trim them just above the cuff.

Knots of orange ribbon and a piping of the same around the yoke add a touch of color to the gown.

The height of simplicity and daintiness is attained in this pretty frock. Point d'esprit, cream white over the palest shade of rose pink. The baby waist, with its elbow sleeves, has no other ornament than a triple row of pale pink rose petals around the neck and shoulder lines and on the ruffles of the sleeves.

These petals are very new in the way of trimming, and one can easily make them herself with a little trouble and patience. Cut as many as you will require to trim your gown in the three sizes out of a firm piece of taffeta silk, then roll the edges and embroider them with a row of French knots. You have no idea what pretty trimming they make, and a girl who was not interested in fancy work might probably enjoy doing this in her idle moments if it was to ornament a dress.

The sleeves are held at the elbow with a fold of pink silk caught with a shaded pink silk rose, and the girdle, with its long sash ends, is held at the back with another of these big soft flowers.

All shades of brown and tans are much in vogue. A deep coffee shade comes in a coarse cross barred net. It is very effective and makes a useful and pretty gown for the house in the evening.

A good way to make it is with a deep ruffle from the knee, put on in scallops with a valenciennes insertion and ruffles of lace on either side. The bottom of the skirt is finished with two or three tucks and several ruffles of the lace.

The yoke of the waist is tucked horizontally and comes down over the sleeves to join the frills with their rows of lace. The body part of the waist is one mass of lace ruffles sewn in scalloped rows. A girdle of pompadour ribbon finishes the waist.

At the present moment sleeves are exciting comment in the world of fashion. A year ago we tried very hard, without much success, to keep them voluminous; now, apparently, we are going to the other extreme and are adopting the short shoulder instead of the long one, and a curiously narrow effect instead of a wide, drooping effect across the chest. It is not, however, compulsory to adhere faithfully to details of this sort, for they always bear alteration.

LET THE WORLD'S INTELLIGENT MINDS DEMAND THAT WAR CEASE, AND IT WILL

ONE of the things I was determined I would not see at the Exposition was the Boer war. My prejudices against war in this era of the world's progress led me to strongly disapprove any exhibition of its methods. I never look at war paintings or read war tales.

It was owing to the charming personality of Mrs. Fisher, hostess of the Maryland Building (and sister to Admiral Schley), that I put aside my personal feelings and saw the terrible epitome of an awful war with the real participants taking the parts.

After witnessing the performance and rousing from its realism I was conscious of but one impression—the absolute imperative duty of every decent and sane human being to use mind, voice, pen and influence for peace. United thought contains more power than swords. Let the intelligent minds of the world demand the abolishment of war and insist upon disarmament, and it will come.

The horror of the realistic war scene was lessened for me at the climax by the premature curiosity of one of the remarkably intelligent horses who was "playing dead."

Just before the curtain obliterated the scene of carnage from sight a "dead" horse lifted his head and "peeked" at the curtain to see if it was drawn. Finding the audience still in view, he quickly resumed his rigid attitude of death.

It was a relief to over-wrought emotions to have this touch of comedy upon the tragic scene.

Captain Arthur H. Blecksley, of Johannesburg, Transvaal, invited our party to his tent, where we were presented to General Cronje. The General speaks no English, but Captain Blecksley rapidly interpreted this remarkable old warrior's ready flow of fervid eloquence, which resulted from questions prompted by my woman's curiosity.

"Is not this reproduction of the horrors of war painful to you?" I asked.

"At first it was," he said. "Then that feeling passed, and I realized it was but a panorama. I felt that, having laid down my arms honorably before General Roberts after the unparalleled heroism of our country had failed before a mightier force, I could without sacrifice of sentiment to help keep alive in the memory of America our efforts for freedom. In it all—and especially in the last battle—I felt that God was with us, allowing us to surrender with such comparatively small loss of life before such tremendous odds."

"Do you approve of war?" I asked. "Do you feel it is necessary still, or do you believe countries might settle their disputes in other ways? Do you think it useless to hope and work for peace?"

"No; a thousand times no. I am heart, mind and soul for peace. Let the whole world work for that end. You Americans have the most wonderful land—it is a great country; but beware that you do not wander from the principles of your founders, or you, too, will drift into war."

General Cronje is a man of property, and his appearance in the Boer War Company is from no need of money.

Many people find it difficult to understand how the old farmer hero could become a showman. Perhaps an unwillingness to remain an obscure subject to the conquerers of his own land may have something to do with it.

The excitement and distraction of his present occupation must be preferable to quiet retrospection.

In a pleasant evening reception, kindly tendered me by Mrs. Fisher, I met General Viljoen and enjoyed a conversation with him. He speaks and writes English well, and is to remain in America some time, perhaps indefinitely. Being a young bachelor of distinguished appearance and literary talents, he will no doubt find an open sesame wherever his path leads.

American women want "Peace," but they dearly love a hero of bloody battles.

They hate war, but they love warriors; they despise a monarchy, but worship royalty.

In fact, the American woman is a paradox.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

The Deep Mystery of Life

By the Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

THE most amazing thing that earth ever witnesses is the passage from death to life.

The moment when that which has hitherto been "dead" becomes "alive" is by all odds the most thrilling in all the history of the planet.

How the inert, senseless, unfeeling thing becomes the animated, self-moving organism is a mystery beside which all other mysteries are tamer than a "twice told tale."

The origin of life is a problem that is as old as the human mind itself. From the dim beginning of human history men have been trying to answer the question: "What is life?" and the latest of the sons of time are still busy at the ancient task.

The problem was tackled by Pythagoras, Plato, Aristotle, by the alchemists of the Middle Ages, by the chemists of the Renaissance, by the savants of the eighteenth century, and by none of them was the old secret brought out into the light.

From Albertus Magnus to Thomas Huxley the search for "spontaneous generation" has ended in failure.

With the help of chemistry, attempt after attempt has been made to generate life from non-living matter, but in every instance the result has been a dissapointment.

Huxley, the best equipped and keenest eyed scientist that ever lived, frankly declared, just before he passed out from us that not one of the innumerable attempts to create life out of non-living matter had succeeded.

It doth not yet appear what life is, but this much is clear, that, so far as our knowledge extends, the production of a living organism is possible only through the agency of living parents.

No life without a prior life. Life only from life. Life from death, never.

Married to Mystery

Boston American's Thrilling Romance of Present Day Life in Boston

Chapter xciv—Continued.

"MY patient's projected marriage," said Fleetwood uneasily, "but, Mrs. Borradale——"

Esther threw herself back with a hysterical laugh. "I thought so," she said. "There is no longer any doubt." For a moment she could say no more.

"I am glad you have told me this," Esther said at least, "and pray, Mr. Fleetwood, do not blame yourself for having spoken of things which—which trouble me. It is well that I should know them. You have unwittingly opened the door on the family skeleton, and fate has decreed that you should make me your confidant. How fate jests with men!"

"If I had known," he began, "I would sooner have bitten through my tongue than——"

"You could not know," she interrupted. "It is chance that has brought it about—or destiny. So you will continue, knowing that you have touched the fringe of the Borradale mystery."

"Mrs. Borradale," he said, "I would rather not continue. There are things which I would rather not say now that I know how you—your family—are affected by them. As a strange experience in my life told to some one who had no knowledge of the people involved, there was no harm in my tale, but now it is different. I do not wish to bring about fresh complications and troubles. It is that which I fear, Mrs. Borradale." He turned and faced her. "Won't you let matters rest as if I had not spoken, and forgive me for my indiscretion in having spoken at all?"

Esther rose and stood by his side. She was very calm now.

"Don't be afraid of that," she said. "I do not thing that anything you may tell me is likely to produce fresh trouble. On the contrary, it may throw light upon dark places. For the sake of our friendship speak exactly as you would have spoken had you not learnt that your story affected me. You will do this?"

"If you command it," he said. "I value your friendship more than anything upon earth. Supposing I should forfeit it through telling you the truth? I am afraid of that. The fact is," he added desperately, "that what I was about to tell you was in the nature of a confession. I fear to speak."

"Have no fear," she whispered. "I promise, I swear to you, that, whatever it is, you shall not lose my friendship. Mr. Fleetwood, I am not forcing your confidence from idle curiosity. I am in the dark myself over many things. I must know all—I must."

"I would not hurt you," he said. "I do not know that there is anything in my story to hurt you, but if there were I should never forgive myself. I am more afraid that you will despise me for the part I played. However, as you command, I will obey. You shall hear all."

"Thank you," said Esther, simply. "There's just one question I should like to ask before you go on," she added. "It is this. Did you make no attempt to trace the spot where these events happened?"

"No," he replied, "nothing. I have no idea even now where I was taken to. But you have been so kind to me, such a real friend, that I knew you would believe me, and so I decided to speak. Something has weighed rather heavily upon my mind and I wanted your advice."

"I will give it," said Esther, softly. "When I interrupted you you had just finished making your examination of Basil——"

"Ah," said Fleetwood. "I had not mentioned that my patient's name was the same as my own, but I see you know it."

"Yes," returned Esther softly. "I know it. He was called Basil Clare."

"I saw at once that the young man was in such a condition that it was hopeless to think of allowing him to leave his bed, as they evidently wished him to do, and I said so forcibly. At this the old man seemed terribly incensed.

"'But he must,' he said, irritably. 'I tell you he must. It is absolutely necessary. For an hour—it need not be longer than that. For one hour to-morrow night. He may stay where he is till then, and afterward you may keep him in bed as long as you like. You may be with him all the time he is up, too. Surely that can be managed?'

"'I will not be responsible for the consequences if you allow such a thing,' I said severely, 'and what is more, you will find it impossible. This man is unconscious now from a terrible blow on the head, which has produced concussion. He will probably remain unconscious for many hours. I will do my best for him, but I can say no more than that.'

"Well, I made my patient as comfortable as I could and, when I had finished, the old man returned to the room and suggested that I needed rest. I was conducted to another bedroom close by, where I was gald enough to throw myself down and snatch a few hours' sleep. My rest was disturbed by horrible noises, cries and yells such as I had heard on my arrival, and once I thought that the door of my room was violently shaken.

"I was left till about 10 o'clock the next day, when the old man entered the room.

"'You may go to your patient as soon as you please,' he said, 'and I hope you will be able during the day to see cause to change your mind respecting him.' Then he sidled up a little nearer to me. 'Get him up for one hour to-night,' he said, 'and I will pay you a thousand dollars. He will have little to do, little to say. He can be carried to and fro. For about ten minutes he will have to stand upright and speak a few words. That is all. Now, surely you can contrive this—for a thousand dollars?'

"'Take me to him,' I said. 'Let me see how he has passed the night.' I found no improvement in my patient," continued Basil. "On the contrary, he was feverish and inclined to be delirious. It was hopeless to think of getting him up—an utter impossibility. I told the old man so. He swore.

"'You must wait the day,' he said, 'he may improve later, he must improve later.'

"I knew that there was no chance of this, so I shrugged my shoulders without a word. The day passed wearily enough.

"I realized that I was practically a prisoner. I had asked about noon to be allowed to go out to make some purchases from a druggist for my patient, presuming that there must be shops somewhere near, but I had been peremptorily refused. 'You must not leave this house,' the old man said. 'Write down what you want and I will send for it.' And this I had been forced to do. 'Am I to consider myself a prisoner?' I asked, then. 'You engaged yourself to come here for twenty-four hours,' he replied, 'possibly longer. I have paid you for that period, and I hold you to your word. Also I warn you against attempting to wander about this house. It isn't safe.'"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years old and am acquainted with a young man of twenty for about a year. I have been communicating with him for a few months and been out with him twice. In his last letter he proposed to me, and as I have no intention whatever in regard to matrimony would it be proper to answer or ignore the letter, as I consider it very impertinent? K. L. J.

I THINK you are rather hard on the young man. There is no impertinence in offering an honest love. Most certainly you should answer his letter. Tell him that you do not love him and make your refusal as kind and courteous as possible.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly let me know if it is proper for a young lady to write to a young man first, or is it the young man's place? What I want to know is: I have been away and met a young man—in fact, I knew him five years ago and we corresponded for two years. We have been angry for over a year. When he came to the city last Winter he called to see me several times. I am deeply in love with him and I know he thinks a great deal of me. I would like to write to him, but when he did not ask me to write I did not know whether it was proper or not. M. S.

If our readers agree with the BOSTON AMERICAN'S position in favor of 80-cent gas; or if they have any cause for complaint against the Gas Trust on account of excessive bills or unjust treatment, we will be glad to print brief letters from them in the hope that publicity will aid in abolishing these grievances. Send letters to Gas Petition Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street.

I WOULD not write him until he asks you to. If he cares for you he is sure to try to make friends again. But on no account cheapen yourself by writing to a man who has not asked you to.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly give me your opinion of a nice young lady that the whole neighborhood admires, that will just do things to make me jealous. C. P.

I THINK she's a naughy girl and needs to be punished. Why don't you try making her a little bit jealous? Perhaps she is too sure of your love. Turn your attentions to some other girl for a while and see what your wayward lady love will do.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very anxious to write and ask you one question which relates to my course of study, and whenever I think of it I feel discouraged. Is a stenographer and typewriter considered a common person when she goes out into the business world striving to make an honest living? And is there any possibility for a girl with a strong character to be led into temptation? I. H. K.

NO work that you do can make you common; that rests entirely with yourself. If you behave in a dignified, modest manner and do your work well I do not think you will find any disrespect in the manner of those with whom you associate. The girl of strong character is quite as likely to be tempted as the one of weak, but she does not yield to the temptation.

Health and Beauty

DEAR MISS LEHR:

I have a formula for the removal of superfluous hair, which consists of the following: Three oz. sulphuret of barium, 12 oz. water, mixed into a paste by wetting with cornstarch. Do you think if I use it the hair will come back? Can you tell me what it would cost to have them removed by electric needle? C. I.

THE formula you mention is the one I usually recommend for the removal of superfluous hairs, and is considered the safest and best for home treatment; but I cannot answer for its permanent results, as really the only effectual remedies for this trouble are such as will destroy the hair capillae, and as yet minor surgery alone has accomplished this.

Electrolysis is the best known of these operations, and it has been so perfected that as now performed it is absolutely painless and leaves not the slightest trace of the operation, restoring the skin to its normal smoothness. I cannot tell you what the cost of such an operation would be, but would advise you to consult only a first-class surgeon if you conclude to resort to it.

DEAR MISS LEHR:

Please give me the recipe for a fluid that will curl the hair, if there is any such fluid. I also want to know if it injurious to the hair. L. E.

THERE are some methods of treating the hair which will promote waviness by keeping it for a time in a condition between dryness and humidity, and one is to shampoo the hair with a soapy water, in which a few grains of carbonate of potash have been dissolved. While the hair is still moist it must be loosely dressed as desired. The effect comes as it dries. These are many simple bandolines which will aid in keeping the hair in curl, and though their constant use is deprecated as tending to cause a deterioration in the structure of the hair, when used occasionally they are harmless.

Carrageen moss, one-half ounce; extract of millefleur, one ounce; eau de Cologne, one pint; elder-flower water (or plain distilled), one pint.

The moss is soaked overnight in the water, heated to dissolve it, then strained and perfumed. The hair should be moistened with it before rolling on kid-covered curlers. It is said to be quite efficacious.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

Ladies' Japanese Wrapper

No. 6,032—Lounging robe or dressing sack styles, which have no other virtue than novelty, appear and disappear, but in the end the conventional Japanese wrapper remains the favorite with a great many people. In the design shown here the season's style of long shoulder effect is carried out in the shirring at shoulders and sleeves. These shirrings are supported by a yoke, which gives shape about the shoulders. The mode is suitable to wash fabrics, silk, albatross, cashmere, challie or any light-weight woolen. Since we now consider the wash material for this season's wear, a dainty construction would be in dotted lawn or cotton crepe, with bands of plain colored material or any color that will contrast tastily.

Sizes 32, 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail the above pattern upon receipt of 10 cents, to cover cost of handling, etc.

All orders should be directed to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

MISS TUDOR TO QUIETLY WED COUNT

There Will Be No Attendants and Only Members of Bride's Family Will Be Present.

WEDDING IS TO-MORROW

By Billie Beacon.

Contrary to general expectations, Miss Elsa Tudor's wedding to Count Alaine Pierrefeu, which is to take place Wednesday afternoon, is to be quiet, with no attendants and only the members of the Tudor family present. The Count, who is a very busy man, Mr. Tudor tells me, is to arrive in the city to-morrow, and will be at the Touraine. Miss Tudor will be given away by her father, and the Tudor family will be represented by Mrs. Tudor and her sisters, the Misses Delia and Mary.

Immediately after the ceremony there is to be a reception at the Tudor home on Beacon street. The bride and groom will be assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Tudor. Not more than thirty friends will be present.

After the ceremony the couple will take a short honeymoon, and will be at home in Newark, N. J., after the new year.

Friends at the Somerset tell me that the dates for the assemblies have been set and are to be January the sixth and February the tenth. These assemblies are the most exclusive affairs Boston has during the Winter.

The list of patronesses has not been completed. A number of those who have served in former years will not be on the list this year owing to their absence from Boston, and also because of their being in mourning. Among the patronesses I expect to see Mrs. Francis I. Amory, Mrs. Herbert Sears and Mrs. Philip Sears, Mrs. Bryce Allen, Mrs. Dudley Pickman and Mrs. H. H. Fay.

We are to have Mrs. Gardiner L. Perry of Newport with us this Winter. She has taken apartments at the Somerset. Mrs. Perry usually spends her Winters, as well as her Summers, in Newport. Undoubtedly she will be hostess of several smart affairs. She has a reputation of being one of the best entertainers in Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Prescott Rowe, the latter formerly Miss Eleanor Livingstone, whose wedding was one of the New York events of last month, have returned from their honeymoon and are now at their new home at 204 West Fifty-fifth street, New York. Mr. Rowe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Rowe of Newbury street, Boston, and is well known to members of the Boston set. He is in business in New York. The couple will be at home after the New Year.

Mrs. Samuel Eliot of Brimmer street is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alexander H. Stevens, at her country place at Lawrence, L. I. She is to be away for two weeks.

'FITZ' TO GIVE DOUGLAS 'LUCK'

Actor-Pugilist Will Go to Brockton to Present a Hand-Made Horseshoe.

"Bob" Fitzsimmons will give a horseshoe of his own making to Governor-elect William L. Douglas to-morrow.

"It's just a little token of admiration from one shoemaker to another," said "Fitz" to-day with twinkling eye.

"Fitz," who knows what it is to win a hard battle, likes the way Mr. Douglas won his political fight. He followed the Massachusetts political struggle closely. He is now in town for his engagement at the Grand Opera House. In one scene of his play he hammers out a horseshoe. It is his custom to give the finished shoe to some one in the audience.

To-morrow Fitzsimmons and his wife, Julia May Gifford, will go to the Douglas home in Brockton. There the horseshoe will be presented to the Governor-elect.

BURNED SAVING MOTHER'S LIFE

Stifled by smoke, and their exit cut off by flames, Mr. and Mrs. Mettling, with their son, Louis Mettling, the well-known long distance bicycle rider, were forced to jump a distance of forty-five feet to the ground from a rear window of their residence, No. 4 Walk Hill street, Jamaica Plain, to save their lives.

The fire, which caused a damage of about $200, was started by the upsetting of a kerosene lamp on a hot stove. Louis Mettling, despite the fierce flames and smoke, rushed to save his mother. He received bad burns about the face and hands, and it is feared that he will be unable to ride in the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden in which he is entered.

SMART WOMEN IN POLICE COURT

Many society women of the Newtons were in West Newton Police Court to-day to hear what Mrs. Edith B. Keith had to testify against her husband, Walter H. Keith, Jr., on her charge of non-support. The family is prominent. The audience was disappointed, however, as the case was continued until Saturday.

Mr. Keith is a member of the house of William H. Keith's Sons & Company, of Boston. Mrs. Keith is a niece of H. H. Bartlett, No. 77 Richardson street, Newton. They were married five years ago, and two years ago they separated. Mrs. Keith alleges that her husband has not supported her for a year.

W. F. CARRUTHERS DEAD.

William F. Carruthers, formerly a well-known real estate and business broker of Boston, is dead at his Chelsea home. He was born in Amesbury sixty-seven years ago. A widow and one daughter survive.

YOUNG HEROINE IS GIVEN MEDAL FOR LIFE SAVING

MISS ERNESTINE F. ATWOOD.

Fourteen-Year Old Melrose Girl Honored for Rescuing Drowning Man.

For saving the life of Harry Smith at Weymouth last Summer, Miss Ernestine F. Atwood, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Atwood, of 16 Parker street, Melrose, has been awarded a silver medal by the Massachusetts Humane Society.

Miss Atwood is a pupil at the Melrose High School, and is very popular among her school friends. Last Summer, while at Rose Cliff, Weymouth, she was bathing near the shore when she heard cries for help. Swimming out to Smith, she found him exhausted. With no thought for her own safety, she grabbed him by the shoulder as he was sinking for the third time and swam with him to the shore, nearly a quarter of a mile distant.

Smith was coachman for a nearby family, and had waded out beyond his depth. Being a poor swimmer, he was unable to reach shore.

Miss Atwood treats her heroic act in a very modest manner, refusing to discuss it, except to say it was no more than anyone would have done under like circumstances.

LABOR

News of the Unions

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS 96

Contributions to this column should be addressed to the Labor Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN. The editor will be glad to receive and print brief reports of meetings, elections and social gatherings of general interest to union labor.

Garment Workers' Union No. 1 has opened a vigorous organization campaign, with a view to bringing the membership up to what it was before the recent strike. The open meeting of the union held yesterday was attended by more than 1,000 garment workers and considerable enthusiasm was shown. It was reported at the meeting that the union label had been introduced in several establishments within the past week.

UNION RATE FOR TEAMSTERS.

President Greaney, of the Sanitary and Street Cleaning Department Teamsters' Union, has reported to his organization that the union scale for two-horse teamsters has been granted by the department. This is an increase of 60 cents a week.

23 APPLY FOR CARD.

It was reported at the meeting of Bakers' Union No. 4 yesterday that during the past week twenty-three additional stores and restaurants have applied for the union card, signifying that they handle only the union product.

BARTENDERS TO NOMINATE.

Nominations for officers for Bartenders' Union will be received at the next meeting of the union. At the meeting yesterday, which lasted from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 in the evening, $346.40 was received in dues. The annual ball will be held in Odd Fellows' Hall, December 12. The December meeting will be held on the third Tuesday, instead of Christmas Day.

LONGSHOREMEN'S DANCE.

Arrangements have been completed by Longshoremen's Union No. 548 for the annual ball of the union to be held in Roughan's Hall, Dec. 7. The balance of the assessment levied by the union for the benefit of the Fall River strikers, amounting to $11.50, was forwarded.

LABOR NOTES.

Another meeting of the building trades organizations will be held this week, in the [illegible] now on to bring every trade into one central body.

Freight Handlers' Assembly No. [illegible], K. of L., yesterday appointed [illegible] ball to be at Roughan Hall, Charlestown, December 1.

Fifty-one applicants were admitted to the Grocery and Provision Clerks' Union yesterday.

A special meeting of the members of cooks' union will be held this evening at No. 45 Eliot street.

O'Connell Assembly of longshoremen of Charlestown admitted nine members at the meeting held yesterday.

Sixteen new members have been admitted to Musicians' Assembly No. 1629, K. of L. James Farrell, Heath street, Roxbury, is the worthy foreman.

Commercial Telegraphers' Union admitted a number of new members at yesterday's meeting.

New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Freight Handlers' Assembly, K. of L., will hold its annual ball in Union Park Hall Thursday. Yesterday's meeting indorsed the bakers' strike and label.

Every member of Lumber Teamsters' Union No. 112 is requested to be present at the next meeting of the union when a vote will be taken on the question of appropriating $150 to the striking teamsters of New York. The annual ball will be held January 19 in Odd Fellows Hall.

HELD IN $1,500 BONDS.

James A. Lee, who was charged with breaking and entering the tailoring shop of Thomas O'Brien, of Medford, on October 17, and with having burglar's tools in his possession, was held in bail of $1,500 by Judge Bruce in the Malden District Court to-day, for trial November 18.

PORT ARTHUR'S 'SAINT' MAKES APPEAL FOR AID

Wife of General Stoessel Asks Rich of Russia to Help the Wounded.

SUFFERING IS TERRIBLE

MOSCOW, Nov. 14.—A letter has been received by a tea merchant named Perloff, of Moscow, from Mrs. Stoessel, wife of the Russian commander at Port Arthur and known as "the saint of Port Arthur," giving some harrowing details of the situation there. The letter is dated October 24, and in it Mrs. Stoessel asks that a collection be made among the rich men of Moscow and the proceeds be sent through the Russo-Chinese bank for the poor defenders of Port Arthur. She adds:

"At the end of the war they will be sent to Russia. There are some who have lost both arms; some either an arm or a leg; some are without eyes; and some have been wounded on the spine, and will remain cripples throughout their lives. There are many unfortunate people.

"You have always been kind and good. My husband greets you and sends his compliments. When the war ends we will see each other in Moscow."

Mrs. Stoessel has heroically been at her husband's side from the first. From the time the first gun was fired she took on herself the direction of the ambulance service. After one of the most deadly attacks on the doomed city, Mrs. Stoessel made a tour of the forts to reassure the garrison. It was one of the most touching incidents of the siege. Men wept, while others knelt down by companies and kissed the hem of the gallant woman's dress as though she were a saint.

ONLY WEDDING CAN FREE THEM

Five Pretty Armenian Girls Detained at Wharf, Waiting Husbands-to-Be.

Garbed in the bright colors worn in their native country, five pretty Armenian girls, who have been in this country but two days, are being held by the immigration officials in the detention pen at Long wharf until their husbands-to-be come to marry them.

Only one of the girls is over twenty. They do not seem to be worrying over the non-appearance of their sweethearts, but appear to be extremely happy.

The girls were sent for by their prospective husbands, who had come to this country and located here. Two of the men live in Lynn, two others in Providence, R. I., while the fifth is in Boston.

The names of the girls and the men they are to marry are as follows:

Markried Tashjian, twenty-five, is to marry Harrootifs Garobidian, of Lynn.

Marian Onanian, eighteen, is to marry Mergerdich Beghdarsian, of Lynn.

Mariam Sarkaffian, seventeen, is to marry Garabed Baghalian, of Providence, R. I.

Markried Narjian, seventeen, is to marry Sumpad Avenian, of Providence.

Argoomanian Iskooshie, eighteen, is to marry Hovanes Baguglan, of Boston.

All of the girls expected to meet their future husbands at the dock. It is thought that the men will probably appear to-day and claim their brides. The marriages will take place at the immigration office.

OLD SCHOOL PUPILS TO HAVE BANQUET

Members of the Old School Boys of Boston Association, comprised of men and women who attended Hub schools more than fifty years ago, will have their annual dinner at Young's Hotel Wednesday afternoon. This organization is one of the unique ones of the country. Any person who attended school in a district now a part of Boston is entitled to be present, and by communicating with Merrill N. Boyden, historian at the Old State House, may secure admission.

YALE PROFESSOR TO WED.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Nov. 14.—The marriage of Roy L. Marston, professor of forestry at Yale, and Miss Julie Parmelee, of that city, is announced to occur on November 22. Mr. Marston is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Marston of this town.

HIS WIFE ILL, CAPT. ISRAEL A SUICIDE AT SEA

Captain of the Admiral Dewey, Friends Say, Ended His Life While Temporarily Insane.

LETTERS TO WIFE, CREW

Friends of Captain Frank Israel, commander of the fruit steamer Admiral Dewey, who committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart while on the way from Jamaica to Boston, believe the rash act was caused by a fit of temporary insanity caused by worry over the ill-health of his wife and personal physical ailments.

Two letters were found in the captain's cabin after he had killed himself. One of them was addressed to his wife and the other to the crew of the Admiral Dewey. The first was in an envelope sealed and addressed. That letter has been duly delivered to Mrs. Israel, who is prostrated by the sad news.

The letter addressed to the crew was written on a pad of paper with a blunt lead pencil, and the only words that were distinguishable were "my clothes" and "home." This letter has been lost and officials of the boat are unable to locate it.

Captain Israel was popular with his crew and with the officials of the company, all of whom regarded him as an extraordinarily capable man. He had brooded a great deal over the sinking of the steamer Kiowa by his steamer last fall in Boston Harbor. He was fully exonerated for that accident.

300 TERRIERS WILL BE SHOWN

Value of Dogs at This Week's Show in Mechanics Building Exceeds $100,000.

When the specialty show of the Boston Terrier Club opens in Mechanics building next Wednesday there will be on exhibition about 300 Boston terriers, whose aggregate value is over $100,000.

All the champions of the country will be there, and in the competition for the team prize for the best four it is estimated that about sixty dogs will line up. James Mortimer will be the sole judge.

Among the noted dogs in the show will be Buzz, entered by Mrs. E. K. Thayer. Buzz is by Broker, out of Reina, and is a persistent prize winner. Another attraction will be Champion Lord Derby, for whom Mrs. George F. Dresser, of Thompson, Conn., paid $3,500, the highest price ever paid for a Boston terrier. Mrs. Dresser has several other entries, including Tommy Tucker, Gypsy and Seahill's Tot.

John C. Sullivan, of Charlestown, who sold Little Star to J. P. Morgan for $1,000 last February, has entered a formidable string, including Revillo Peach, Little Star II., Lord Belle, Sweet Marie and Miss Pigeon. Dr. F. H. Osgood will show his toy Boston terrier, Napoleon, who weighs only ten pounds, among other dogs. The Roy Roy Kennels, of Englewood, N. J., will exhibit Champion Colonel Monte, Oarsman, Roy Jim, Grizel, Chubley and Rob Roy Fizz.

James A. Davis, of the Presto Kennels, has entered his string for exhibition, but not for competition. It includes Champion Sportsman, The Major, Little Jap, Peppo, Monte G., Champion Lady Dainty, Lady Dimple, Lady Minto, The Show Girl and Snowflake.

Among other exhibitors will be Walter F. Stone, H. D. Forbes, W. J. Keane, "Uncle Jim" Crohan, Frank Crohan, G. J. Kimball, the Strafford Kennels, Dwight Moore of the Long Island Kennel Club, Frank Donders of Brockton, Dr. J. H. Foquet of Oil City, Pa., J. F. Murray, Alexander Goode, the Spottswood Kennels of Philadelphia, "Joe" McMullen, Miss Mary H. Ranlet of Rockland, Me., and Miss Alice Browuell.

FALLS IN STREET, STILL UNCONSCIOUS

John Walsh, of No. 605 Massachusetts avenue, dropped unconscious at the corner of Tremont and Springfield streets early to-day, struck his head heavily upon the curbstone, and sustained contusions of the scalp. He was taken to the City Hospital, and has not regained consciousness. Walsh is forty years old, married, and is well known in the South End.

Business Men, Do You Want Cheap Labor?

Here's a Great Chance—But You Won't Take It

Some of our very good friends and some of our very good AND SINCERE ENEMIES are business men who say to the editor of this newspaper:

> I like your newspaper. I believe you are sincere. I know you pay higher wages and salaries than anybody else. But I think you go to excess. I think you talk TOO MUCH about good pay for working people. I think you don't consider sufficiently the interests of business men who need reasonable priced labor if they want to prosper.

To all of these well-meaning friends and critics we offer the following statement clipped from an old fogy newspaper, one which kowtows to the man with the dollar and pays its people as little as it can:

> The 700 shoemakers' shops in Canton employ 8,000 men and 20,000 women, who work from daylight till dark. Since the recent introduction of kerosene lamps their hours even have been lengthened. They get from about $2.60 to $5 a month in wages, and their meals, consisting of rice and salt fish.

From the point of view of the man who wants CHEAP men, the City of Canton in China OUGHT to be better than Boston. The miserable slaves of that country work from daylight until dark—or, rather, they did work from daylight until dark. Now that they have kerosene oil lamps they work later. They earn five dollars a month or less, and that ought to leave the employer a nice margin for profit.

But we should like to say, as we have said before, to the earnest, well-meaning business man who criticizes our advocacy of high wages:

Why don't you abandon America, where we insist on building up wages, and devote your genius to some commercial enterprise in that labor paradise called "Canton, China?"

The business man who should go out to Canton delighted with the labor conditions would come back a wiser man. He would come back with kindlier feelings for a newspaper that wants TO GIVE THE PEOPLE MONEY TO SPEND.

If a man started a department store in Canton WHO WOULD BUY HIS GOODS?

What could he sell to a woman who makes two dollars and sixty cents a month? Wouldn't he be glad to get back to a country where the woman's husband works for four dollars a day, while she haunts the bargain counter?

If a man started a theatre in Canton, who would buy seats? And if he started a hotel, who would patronize it?

This newspaper does not support honest, reasonable labor unions in order to BOOM BUSINESS.

We try to promote good wages, NOT that women may have money to go shopping—although we wish them to enjoy themselves in that way.

Our principal desire is that the American father and mother should have money to feed their children properly, money enough to keep these children out of the factory.

We demand short hours for the workman because we feel that the American mechanic is entitled to time for recreation and study, as well as the American millionaire.

Just incidentally, we ask the business men to observe that the newspaper which fights against these Canton methods is fighting in the interests of every business man who has sense enough to realize the difference between Canton and Boston as a business centre.

Canton would be even worse for a department store than it is for a mechanic.

Business men, please think it over.

Talk It Over with the Savings Bank Man

Before You Conclude to Draw Out Your Deposit to Play the Stock Market

If you have money in a savings bank, and if you get excited by the stories of how John W. Gates or Charles M. Schwab or Mr. Leeds made a million in a day on a lucky turn in stocks, talk it over with the president of the bank before you take your money out to speculate.

There are thousands of savings banks in this country. They are usually well managed. They are splendidly managed in this city. They pay interest of from three to four per cent. on deposits. They cannot well pay five per cent., because they seek safe investments. They keep the money of small depositors. The account seems at times to give poor returns. It gives a certain return. They are solid institutions because they are not conducted by gamblers. In Wall Street there are thousands of genteel gamblers doing business. You hear of them ever day. You hear how in some turn of the market some man made a million. If he made a million, ten men lost $100,000, or one thousand men lost $1,000.

You do not hear of the losers.

Speculation flourishes off the inexperienced public. If you have $500 and go into Wall Street, you can put up five per cent of the face value of the stuff you want to buy or sell, and run a chance of making $1,000 or $2,000. But if you put up the margin and the market goes against you, that puts you out of business.

And the market is more apt to go against you than with you, for you are playing in another man's game. He knows; you do not.

You in Wall Street are ignorant. What chance have you against the man there who is smart?

Not all men in Wall Street are dishonest. Not all transactions in Wall Street are dishonest, but unless you know the game, all transactions you make will be dangerous.

The spiders have been weaving webs for you all this Fall. They will tell you prices are going to advance. Maybe they will advance, but if you go in on a margin, one downward move will end you.

If you are determined to speculate, buy outright, but if you have a small amount of money in a savings bank, and your neighbor tells you he put up $100 last week and doubled his money in two days—talk it over with the savings bank president or trustee before you draw out your money to put up $500 to win $1,000 in twenty-four hours.

If you still think your neighbor who put up $100 and won $200 in two days has hit on a proper way of getting rich and breaking into the Four Hundred, just watch that neighbor for six months. If at the end of six months that neighbor has run his $100 into several thousand, then this advice may be all wrong.

Still, even then, if you think your neighbor is right and we are wrong, just talk it over with the savings bank president.

THINGS YOU SOMETIMES SEE

Where are the Headquarters of the Women's Christian Temperance Union?

JUST THE THING

"Wot d' yer want wid a bat when ye're goin' ter play football?"

"Wot do I want wid it? W'y, it's de best ting in de woild ter bust a rush line wid."

INDEED HE WOULD

"It seems to me you're before me very frequently."

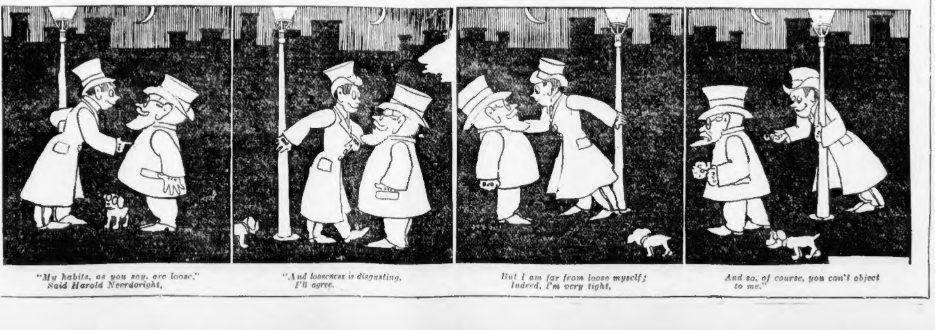
"Yessir. If youse gave tradin' stamps, Jedge, I'd be right in it!"

WHAT AILED HIM

LION—What's the matter, Mr. Snake? It looks as though you had experimented with some hair-grower!

SNAKE—No, I swallowed a porcupine.

NOW WHAT D'YE THINK OF THAT?



"My habits, as you say, are loose,"
Said Harold Neerdoright,

"And looseness is disgusting,
I'll agree.

But I am far from loose myself;
Indeed, I'm very tight,

And so, of course, you can't object
to me."

BY THE STENOGRAPHER

THE ONLY WAY TO FIND OUT WHAT SORT OF A HUSBAND A MAN WILL MAKE IS TO MARRY HIM

"The woman of the lucky number gets him for a husband."

"I SEE," said the Stenographer, "that a man out in Arizona has started a matrimonial lottery for women only, in which the winner of the lucky number gets him for a husband. The way he figures it out, he's bound to make a fortune that will put Mr. Rockefeller in the piker class of financiers.

"'There are 'steen million old maids in the country,' he says to himself, 'who are all on the still hunt for a husband, and who would simply jump at the chance of taking a long shot at getting one for the small sum of one dollar. Why, the returns from Massachusetts alone will land me in the middle of Easy street.' Great head. Great scheme, eh!"

"I like his nerve. He must think he's a capital prize," commented the Bookkeeper.

"Most men think that," returned the Stenographer. "Most men act as if every woman they knew was hot-footing it after them, and no matter how many times they have the icy mitt handed to them it doesn't shake their opinion that the girls are breaking their necks to catch 'em. And when a man does marry he feels like his wife ought to spend her life being grateful to him for having saved her from being a spinster."

"Matrimony," observed the Bookkeeper, "is a wild-cat speculation, anyway. When it comes to taking risks it makes any other sort of gambling look as safe as a fixed thing."

"Right you are," agreed the Stenographer, "and as far as a woman is concerned drawing a husband on a lottery ticket is about as good a way of getting one as any other. There is no earthly way of finding out before you marry a man what sort of a side partner he is going to make, and after you marry him it's too late."

"I don't see why a woman can't get a pretty good line on a man before she ties up with him," put in the Bookkeeper. "To begin with, she can tell whether she likes his looks."

"She can," assented the Stenographer, "but she's mighty apt to lose out on that play. Many a woman who marries a man because he is the main pretty boy in her circle finds out that he regards marriage as a license to cut out the shaves and pass up the swell clothes, and that he gets hump-shouldered and baldheaded and acquires a front extension figure. You never know what you are getting when you marry for looks."

"She can find out whether he is generous enough," said the Bookkeeper.

"That she can't," replied the Stenographer. "Many a man who will set 'em up all night for a crowd of barroom loafers haggles with his wife over her carfare and screams that he is being robbed every time she buys herself a $2.50 hat. Nor does his conduct before marriage, even toward her, tip her off as to how he is going to act afterward. There are plenty of men who kept their sweethearts in violets who kick about having to keep their wives in cabbage."

"She can find out if a man is sympathetic," said the Bookkeeper.

"Oh, any man will let you weep on his shoulder before you are married to him," returned the Stenographer. "Nobody but her husband or your brother feels privileged to tell a woman not to make a fool of herself when she cries."

"She can find out if a man is a good son," continued the Bookkeeper.

"And have his mother's pies thrown in her teeth every day of her life. Nay, nay, Alphonso!" exclaimed the Stenographer. "The model son is worst ever as a husband."

"Isn't there any way for a woman to find out what sort of a husband a man will make?" asked the Bookkeeper.

"Yes—one," answered the Stenographer, "by marrying him, and women are always ready to take the chances. That's the reason the Arizona man's scheme of raffling himself off ought to be a winner." BELLE BLITZ.

"He regards marriage as a license to cut out the shaves and pass up the swell clothes."

The Lessons of the Hour

By Harry B. Metcalf

DEMOCRACY, if it would win, must know the people's need;
Must face with bolder battle front the serried hosts of greed;
Must build its faith anew on truths that long have stood
As bulwarks of the principle of human brotherhood.

Oh, leaders, take your warning from the lesson that is told;
Rekindle now the beacon-fires and keep them as of old;
Again take up the noble work by patriot chiefs begun—
Return from doomful by-ways to the path of JEFFERSON.

Press all thy banners forward with the purpose and the pledge,
To strike for human rights against the power of privilege;
To be the hope of those who toil, to champion the oppressed—
And victory, in all good time, shall on thy standards rest.

Little Editorials from the People

If our readers agree with the BOSTON AMERICAN'S position in favor of 80-cent gas, or if they have any cause for complaint against the Gas Trust on account of excessive bills or unjust treatment, we will be glad to print brief letters from them in the hope that publicity will aid in abolishing these grievances. Send letters to Gas Petition Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street.

ALL POSSIBILITIES ARE OPEN TO A YOUNG MAN OF THIS KIND

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

What are the possibilities for a young man who doesn't drink, smoke, chew, gamble, associate with doubtful companions or use improper language, but abstains from many things most young men are in the habit of doing more or less. I have been accused of being intelligent and of having good judgment.

Acting on the hint, I am improving myself by taking a course in a business college, studying accounting, shorthand, typewriting, business law, besides doing much reading and thinking.

I have many things to be thankful for, viz.: having intelligent parents, being of good size, nearly six feet tall, weighing 170 pounds, large lungs, strong muscles, a good home. I would say that you have the best artists there are to do your illustrating and you print the best editorials I ever read. E. E. M.

LABOR'S VOICE HEARD AT LAST

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A new star has arisen in the East. Labor's voice has been heard in the Old Bay State. Its significance will be acknowledged by all lovers of good government and within a few years the men who create all the wealth of the nation will be bound in one solid compact body. When that hour comes, victory will be theirs. The inevitable must come.

For several years we have had license, not liberty. We see to-day a moneyed oligarchy, instead of a republic in its true sense. Will the present incumbent of the Presidency, now that he is elected by the people, see the handwriting on the wall? What will Roosevelt do, stand pat, or bursting the chains that bind him, rise to the occasion, and be the man he was in former days? He has an opportunity to immortalize himself. Will he do it?

East Boston. T. C. KENNEDY.

APPROVES THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S POLICY OF REPRESENTING ALL CLASSES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your paper has, I believe, been accused of "yellow journalism" on many occasions. However, I am one of the numerous readers who firmly believe in the policy adopted by your paper, and that is, publishing the truth in a startling manner. That does not constitute "yellow journalism" by any means, and only a narrow-minded person would so consider it.

Your paper is the only one in this city representing the masses as well as the classes. C. C. MASON.
